HALIFAX, Friday, Dec. 26.

The Royal mail steamship Europa, Capt. Leitch, from Liverpool 11 A. M., 12th, for Queenstown evening of the 6th inst., entered at this port this afternoon, last night with 55 passengers for Halifax, and sailed again for that port at daylight this morning.

Steamship Teutonia, from New-York, arrived at Queenstown on the 12th inst.

Steamship Etna, from New-York, arrived at Liverpool on the 11th.

The prevailing comments on American affairs are generally of an unimportant character.

The Belgian Gazette says the war steamer Alabama has been ordered to leave Kagosima, and after visiting New-York to join Admiral Farragut's squadron at Bermuda. This movement looks like a concentration of the disposable force of Mississippi squadron in the localities in which recently reported outrages on British shipping by Federal cruisers have been supposed, with a knowledge that there is no Government fund capable of protecting British vessels and with instructions to do so. The Gazette thinks that even WILKES will hardly venture upon further violation or violation of neutral territory.

The recently formed London Emancipation Society has issued circulars to members of all denominations, asking them to give publicity to the subject of negro emancipation from the pulpit, in view of the inauguration of Mr. Lincoln's emancipation policy with the new year.

The Star says: "The most enthusiastic meeting that has taken place in America, to express sympathy with the anti-slavery party in America, assembled three thousand persons were present."

Twenty-three vessels have left Liverpool for America during the present week, forty-three have cleared, and three have registered at Liverpool under British colors.

A general meeting of the Atlantic Telegraph Company was held in London, on the 11th. Hon. Lewis Swanne Wormley presided, and stated the terms on which it was proposed to raise 2,000,000 new capital, as already published. He announced that within three days the 275,000 had, in response to the circular, been subscribed. A resolution was carried to raise the new capital in shares of £25 each for laying down a new cable. The meeting was regarded as the most encouraging and successful.

The Daily News, Star and other journals warmly advocate the claims of the Company.

The Times says satisfaction is advertised that the new undertaking for laying the cable has been formed with confidential support, and will shortly be introduced.

FRANCE.

There are again rumors in Paris of unfavorable news from Mexico, and urgent calls for reinforcements, which, it is said, will be sent under the device of establishing a reserve at Martinique.

The Cardinal Archbishop of Paris has gone to Rome, it is rumored, in the name of the Emperor to acquaint to the Pope the Emperor's views, with a view to the concessions necessary on the part of the Papal Government.

The Bourse was dull. Rentes 70c. 65c.

ITALY.

Parliament recommenced on the 11th. RATTAZZI explained his policy and promised Administration reform, based upon the system of decentralization and development of constitutional liberties. He complained the army for having, under a partial trial, reconstituted the authority of the laws. He said, "With continued confidence in the patriotism of Italian valor, we abstain from making promises, which might not be followed by immediate effects, and would the course of events without illusion and without discouragement. We shall be careful to maintain alliances, while preserving the independence of the country." He concluded by appealing for union, which is prevented in the King.

In a duel between GARIBALDI's 22d son and Col. Bonamicci, who received 6 wounds, the young man appeared to have received a mortal wound in the side, and the Colonel was seriously hurt.

SPAIN.

Gen. PRIM has made lengthy explanations in the Cortes on his conduct in Mexico. He read confidential letters addressed to him by Admiral LA GRANDIERE, containing strange details relative to the Mexican expedition. According to these letters, Almonte declared he was convinced by Napoleon and Archduke Maximilian, jointly to put forward the candidacy of the latter, and that the French troops would guarantee the throne of Mexico to the Archduke. Gen. PRIM also read letters by O'DONNELL and Gen. ZARCO, representing the sinister execution of the Treaty of London. He said an English representative had made similar declarations to him, and that, under the circumstances, he deemed it wise to embark the Spain. In conclusion, he expressed his opinion that the French expedition would not have the desired result.

LONDON, Saturday, Dec. 13.

There is nothing important in politics to-day.

THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

FROM GEN. HOOKER'S COMMAND.

Rebel Perfidy—An Outrage in the Case of a National Surgeon—Gen. Meade Assigned to the Command of the Fifth Army Corps—Christmas Gaieties.

CENTER GRAND DIVISION, ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Wednesday, Dec. 24, 1862.

Another instance of rebel perfidy has recently come to notice. The circumstances connected with the case are of such a nature that the Government should feel bound to demand an immediate explanation, and unless it be clearly shown that a breach of usage has been committed, retaliatory measures should at once be instituted.

Surgeon N. A. HASKIN, of the Twentieth Maine Regiment, having crossed the river to Fredericksburgh on the day of the battle, for the purpose of attending to our wounded, which duty he faithfully performed, was, shortly after our forces were withdrawn from the town, seized by two ragged rebels, taken to the headquarters of their General, and required by him, before a release could be effected, to sign a written parole that he would not bear arms against the rebel States, nor in any way render aid to their enemies. The parole is the same as that which all private soldiers (prisoners) are required to sign upon being sent across the line without the regular form of exchange. In a written statement of the affair, Dr. HASKIN sets forth that having become fatigued from excessive labor, he sought repose in a house where several of our officers were staying, previously giving directions to the orderlies to rouse him should any important movement take place. This was on Monday night. At 9 o'clock, the same night, our troops commenced evacuating the town, and at about 9 o'clock the next morning they were nearly all upon this side of the river, and the last pontoon bridge was taken up. Through some culpable negligence the orderlies failed to awaken the Doctor, consequently upon leaving the house late the next morning he was confronted by the rebels, as before stated, and made to attend to a number of our wounded, who had not been removed from the place. That which subsequently transpired forms the unprecedented and base feature of the affair—the forcing of Dr. HASKIN to sign a parole.

It has been the usual practice to allow Surgeons to resign their commands without exacting from them such an agreement to terms as was exacted from Dr. HASKIN, and why, in his particular instance, the rebels should take the course they have, is a matter that deserves more than passing attention from our authorities.

Maj.-Gen. MEADE, formerly of the Pennsylvania Reserves, has been assigned to the command of the Fifth Army Corps, and will assume the duties of his position to-morrow. Since Gen. FITZ-JOHN's recall, the corps has been ably and skillfully commanded by Gen. BUTTERFIELD, who evidenced at the battle of Fredericksburgh a thorough competency to handle a large a body of troops. The defences of Fredericksburgh were placed under the immediate supervision of Gen. BUTTERFIELD. He has proved himself an officer whose services cannot be too highly valued. Gen. BUTTERFIELD will resume the command of the First Division, Fifth Corps, to-morrow. Gen. MEADE bears an acknowledged reputation as a high military officer, and will doubtless sustain the prestige so long enjoyed by the Corps.

An unlimited supply of Christmas delicacies has been forwarded to the army within the past few days, through the express and other agencies. Each train from Aquia Creek has attached one or more cars freighted with boxes and packages directed to officers and private soldiers. The gratification evinced by the recipients of these friendly gifts can be better imagined than described. It is a pleasure to note, that although many thousands of soldiers in the field will be deprived of their accustomed Christmas festivities at home, yet very many will be enabled to pass the day cheerfully and happily.

FROM THE ELEVENTH ARMY CORPS.

A Reconnoitering—The Enemy at Reilly's Ferry—Rebel Soldiers Captured.

STAFFORD COURT-HOUSE, Wednesday, Dec. 24, 1862.

The army remains in statu quo. Generals BURNSIDE and SUMNER are yet in Washington, but are expected to return to-day, when, it is supposed, something will be known as to the next movement of the army.

The report as to the rebels being in force north of the Rappahannock River is now believed to be premature. The raid upon our line of communication with Alexandria by land, it is true, was made by HAMPTON's Legion, but there is no positive evidence of any large force either at Brentsville or Warrenton. There is certainly a small body of troops at the latter place, and a few at Rappahannock Station. Gen. HAMMON reconnoitered the Rappahannock, going southward, on Monday last.

A cavalry force, composed of a part of the Ninth and Fourth New-York Cavalry, under Col. DE CHESNEY, returned yesterday from a reconnoissance to the Rappahannock. Arriving at Morrisville, one detachment, under Capt. KEENEY, of the Ninth New-York, was sent off to the left of the main road leading to Kelleyville, and directed to proceed to the ferry, unless intercepted by a superior force of the enemy. He had been gone but a few minutes when he met a superior rebel force, and sent a messenger to Col. CHESNEY, informing him of the fact. Maj. MASON, of the New-York Ninth, was then sent on a country road to the right, for the purpose of cutting off the party of rebels, but they doubtless got wind of the movement, for they fled hastily across the river at Kelley's Ford. Maj. MASON then moved toward the ford, and found on the opposite side a force of infantry and cavalry, numbering perhaps a 500 men, with several pieces of artillery. The rebels opened fire with rifles upon our advance guard, but did no damage. Our force then obeyed instructions by falling back. None of the enemy was seen this side.

The Seventeenth Regiment Pennsylvania Cavalry came into camp to-day, and reported that they had captured six rebel soldiers in the vicinity of Dumfries. They were paroled. Notwithstanding the reports to the contrary, the troops of Gen. BURNSIDE's command are in the best of spirits, and they are looking anxiously for his return.

The weather has again become mild, and the roads are, consequently, very muddy. But a few days of sunshine—provided it is to be had—will make the traveling good again.

Evacuation of Winchester by the Rebels—Great Destitution Among the Citizens.

BALTIMORE, Friday, Dec. 26.

Col. KEYES moved from Romney and took possession of Winchester on Tuesday morning, when the rebel pickets left there took their departure.

The rebel Gen. JONES, with 2,500 men, had occupied this place the week previously, but had left, going toward Staunton.

MILROY's forces were at Middleton, intending to move on toward Winchester.

The Winchester Railroad has been entirely destroyed by the rebels, and the iron carried off by them.

Great destitution exists among the people at Winchester. The common necessaries of life are at famine prices, and hardly procurable at that.

NEWS FROM FORTRESS MONROE.

Another Skirmish on the Blackwater—Rebel Pickets Captured—Affairs in North Carolina.

FORTRESS MONROE, Thursday, Dec. 25.

Lieut.-Col. STEVENSON, of the Eleventh Pennsylvania Cavalry, Col. SPEAR's regiment, had a warm engagement with the enemy at Joiner's Bridge, on the Blackwater, yesterday, four miles above Franklin. They drove the enemy's pickets on this side of the river, capturing four of their pickets, one cavalryman and horse, and three infantry soldiers and their arms.

Col. STEVENSON's advance with their carabineers, under the gallant Lieut. JOHN S. BOYD, first engaged the enemy at very short range. Finally, discovering the enemy in superior numbers above and below us on the river, with our very small forces of four small squadrons in peril of being flanked, STEVENSON very wisely concluded to retire, which he did in safety.

The following is from the Newbern (N. C.) Progress of Dec. 18:

"The funeral of Col. GRAY, of the Ninety-sixth New-York Regiment, was attended on Wednesday afternoon, the Eighth Massachusetts Regiment and the Third New-York Artillery doing escort duty. Col. GRAY was killed at the battle of Kinston. He had been in the seven days' battle before Richmond.

The Free Labor Association of Craven County, is rapidly gaining strength. E. W. CARSWELL, of this city, is President.

The Free Labor nomination for Congress has been tendered to CHARLES HENRY FOSTER, who declines, having already enlisted the authorities to raise a cavalry regiment of North Carolina Union Volunteers.

The schooner Alice D. Wade, released to her owners by order of Gov. SEWARD, has been retaken by special authority from the Navy Department.

THE ELECTIONS IN VIRGINIA.

The Voting at Suffolk—Ballots Instead of Bullets—Skirmishing near Smithfield.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Dec. 26.

A letter from Suffolk, Va., dated the 22d inst. states that the election for members of Congress took place the day before, agreeably to the proclamation of Major-Gen. DIX.

Contrary to the laws of Virginia, ballots were cast instead of voting viva voce.

In order to give the people of Smithfield an opportunity to show their attachment to the Union, two ballot-boxes were sent down to them in charge of Lieut.-Col. OSBORNE, commanding two hundred of the First New-York Mounted Rifles.

Suspecting that the rebels would be anxious to visit the polls, Col. OSBORNE sent the boxes direct to Smithfield, in charge of a small guard, and proceeded with the remainder of his command to Windsor.

Learning that the rebels had left the place but a short time before, Col. OSBORNE proceeded cautiously toward the Isle of Wight, and when about three miles out, came up with them. He sent his compliments in the shape of "shell" from his howitzers, and they responded handsomely with "sixpenny-bits."

A short skirmish revealed one regiment of rebel infantry, with two pieces of artillery, and some cavalry.

Col. OSBORNE then thinking it would be safer to look up voters nearer Suffolk, slowly retired.

The rebels attempted to surround him, and at one time were only 150 yards in his rear, whereupon Col. OSBORNE suddenly wheeled his command about and fired a volley, which emptied twenty of the rebel saddles in quick time.

The skirmishing continued for six miles. Two prisoners and one horse were taken from the rebels.

None of our men were lost or injured.

It is thought it will be a long time before the "election returns" come in from Smithfield. NANSEMOND polled 35 votes, 26 of which were for Mr. CAMPBELL, 12 for Mr. MCCLURE, and one scattering.

A Prize Fight.

NEW-YORK VS. BOSTON.

BOSTON, Friday, Dec. 26.

A prize fight took place yesterday afternoon in the presence of about one hundred "roughs," between BILLY DONNELLY, of New-York, and "Young Shiner," of Boston. The "heroes" of the occasion were both of the "light weight" order. After sixteen rounds had been fought BILLY DONNELLY was declared the victor.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

Critical Condition of the French Army in Mexico.

A Protest from the Mexican Minister Against Our Furnishing Supplies.

The President's Emancipation Proclamation.

SECRETARY CHASE'S FINANCIAL SCHEME.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Dec. 26.

THE FRENCH IN MEXICO.

An official information from Mexico represents the condition of the French Army of Invasion as most critical. Their ranks are being thinned by sickness and want of wholesome food, and agents have been sent to this country for supplies of various kinds, and empowered to make large contracts for future use. These facts having reached the Mexican Minister here, he has entered his solemn protest against such supplies being allowed to go forward. Secretary SEWARD, however, declines to interfere, and complaint is made that he even extends to the French privileges denied to the Mexicans. Whatever cause may exist for this charge, it is unquestionable that much ill-feeling is being engendered in the Mexican Embassy.

THE PRESIDENT'S POLICY.

There certainly is no occasion for the general air of doubt that seems to surround men's opinions in regard to the President's policy after Jan. 1. His antecedents, his messages, his late declarations, all conspire to impress upon us the fact that he will fully realize the affirmations made in his Proclamation of Emancipation.

Such readers of the Times, however, as prefer to rely upon credible journalistic statements rather than trust to reflections, may rest assured that in President LINCOLN's present intention there is no "shadow of turning" from the purpose deliberately formed to carry out the promises of the Proclamation with an unflinching resolution.

The chief difficulties supposed to surround the President in carrying out his emancipation policy vanish at the important moment of its enforcement approaches. He will reasonably except from its operation the States of Delaware, Maryland, Kentucky, Tennessee and Missouri, with portions of Virginia, North Carolina and Louisiana. Thus, finally, will the principle be officially affirmed, that Freedom is to be the rule and Slavery the exception, and this action of the President is undoubted to meet the approval of even those who are considered most radical on the subject.

SECRETARY CHASE'S FINANCE BILL.

Secretary CHASE, we are informed, has concluded to withdraw from the Committee of Ways and Means his bill, submitted on Wednesday, for the purpose of making important modifications in the first and second sections, which contain all that relates to the immediate replenishment of the Treasury. We shall refrain from sending the text of this bill until it has received the final seal of the Secretary's judgment. All abstracts as yet published by your contemporaries are incorrect.

Mr. STEVENS also has a carefully prepared bill, which is well regarded by the Committee, though it differs essentially from that of Secretary CHASE, and which he will formally submit at an early day.

THE M'DOWELL CASE.

In the McDowell Court of Inquiry to-day, the cross-examination of Gen. STERN by Gen. McDOWELL was continued. Gen. STERN admitted that he knew nothing of the preparations made by Gen. McDOWELL for the defense of Thoroughfare Gap; that his opinion as to those preparations was founded upon results; and that he did not know that Longstreet was held and checked by forces left by Gen. McDOWELL to meet him. Gen. STERN stated that Gen. McDOWELL did not order him to countermarching so as to "bring his forces in the evening the same place they left at dawn," and testified that the countermarching was by order of Gen. POPE. The cross-examination was very long and searching, and the discussions quite animated. Gen. McDOWELL insisted that his cross-interrogatories were not explicitly answered by the witness.

THE CENSORSHIP OF THE PRESS.

A great outcry is made against the Press on account of errors and exaggerations in the dispatches from the Army of the Potomac and from Washington. These inaccuracies are to be deprecated, and every means should be taken to avoid them; but it is a fact, not yet wholly known to the public, that the chief fault is in the premises made at the Government itself.

After the recent battle at Fredericksburgh, every effort was made by the correspondents there to transmit the facts speedily to their respective papers; and every effort was made by the Government to prevent them from doing so. The telegraphic wires were forbidden, except to the most meagre statements, and those first to receive official approval; and reporters were compelled to run a blockade more strict than that of Charleston Harbor, in order to carry through the accounts they had written on the spot. From Washington, also, no accounts of any importance were allowed to go by telegraph.

The public, as well as the Press, has already learned that the Government manipulates army news to suit its supposed necessities. As a rule, success has been allowed a speedy announcement, while disaster has been permitted to proclaim itself only from the lips of straggling refugees, or through rebel bulletins. So it has finally become a proverb, that the silence of the Government is a virtual declaration of defeat; and when, after the conflict of Sunday the 14th inst., the truth was withheld by its officers and agents, it is not strange that the experiences and apprehensions of the public and the Press should coincide to invest the events of that battle with an exaggerated and disastrous character.

Now that the agents of this censorship are beginning to declare their conviction that it is destined to a permanent existence, it is well for us to consider the true influence it exerts on the country and the war—and if, as many believe, not only are its evils greatly in excess of its benefits, but its consequences are altogether evil, and continued, under its present management, with any benefits whatever, then it will become the duty of the Government to make the Press one of its earliest reforms.

THE RAILROADS BETWEEN NEW-YORK AND WASHINGTON.

That the Companies controlling the railroad lines between New-York and Washington are satisfied of the sincerity of the movement in Congress in favor of a new road, or Government regulation of the present lines, is apparent from the new programmes they have laid down, to take effect early in January. It is altogether probable that these Companies, by this tardy consideration of the public comfort, (and their own interest,) may avert any immediate use on the part of Congress; but it is to be hoped that the reforms may be thorough and durable, or that some one of the plans contemplating legislation, may be adopted, in order to secure the public from the impositions now practiced.

REWARDING MERIT IN THE ARMY.

Though a great deal has been said about the gallantry of that little band which, during the recent attack on Fredericksburgh, crossed the Rappahannock, under the galling fire of the enemy's sharpshooters, and drove them from their hiding-places—thus saving the movement from a demoralizing disaster in its initiation—yet we do not see that any steps have been taken toward recognizing their brilliant service, by resolution or reward. At the very least, each of those braves should be presented with one of the medals being prepared under Senator WILSON's bill or his WIFE, and the three capable should at once receive promotion for their inspiring and successful heroism.

In this connection, we must express our pleasure to learn that Col. HALL, commanding the Third Brigade of Sumner's Corps, Second Division, from which this little band was selected, is likely to secure the promotion he so well deserves. Col. HALL is one of the Fort Sumter immortals, (as yet poorly rewarded for their devotion and daring,) and has brilliantly purchased the career he there so generously began. He is strongly urged for a Brigadiership by Gen. HOOKER, who says in a recent letter: "I have observed his conduct in action, and have a high opinion of his courage and ability."

CHRISTMAS IN ALEXANDRIA.

Amidst the general distribution of Christmas comforts among the hospitals of this vicinity, the new convalescent camp in Alexandria was not neglected; but unfortunately the arrangements were bungled to bad hands, so far at least as some of the messages were concerned. From the tenor of their remarks, the delay and evidently intentional lack of system in the distribution, the apparently designed effect was produced, and what was the consequence, in which the goods were scattered in confusion and in mobs, and appropriated by a general scramble. Some of the secret Secessionists, charged with the distribution of the charities of Northern homes, succeeded quietly of the disgraceful spectacle they were so successful in producing, that it was "A good thing," and wished the lamp might be broken up and the soldiers sent to the army to win the people of Alexandria there; and further destroyed their belief that half the army would as soon fight under Jeff. DAVIS as for the Union. It was an affair, the disgrace of which should not all attach to the soldier.

TO THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Dec. 26.

SECRETARY CHASE'S FINANCIAL VIEWS.

The Secretary of the Treasury, in compliance with the request of the Committee of Ways and Means, has prepared and sent to them a bill embodying his views. The first sections of the bill give authority to three hundred millions of dollars for the service of the current year, and six hundred millions for the service of the next fiscal year, and to raise these sums in any of the modes heretofore sanctioned by this Congress as the public exigencies will require. The notes include the issue of 5 per cent. bonds, 7.30 bonds, 7 per cent. bonds or bonds bearing less rates of interest, and also the issue of small notes bearing 3.65 per cent. interest and legal tender notes bearing no interest.

The Secretary, in a letter to the Committee, expresses a strong desire to have the bills as to the modes of the provisions and the amounts to be provided to each mode, determined precisely as possible by Congress.

The remaining sections of the bill authorize the formation of Banking Associations to issue notes furnished by the United States, alike in form, and secured alike by United States bonds, but payable on demand primarily by the issuing Associations. The bill in its main features is the same as that introduced by Representative HOOPER, during last session.

In his letter the Secretary expresses his profound sense of the importance of this measure to the negotiation of loans, to the collection of the internal revenue, and to the security of the people against the evils of an enormous and irredeemable paper money circulation.

STAFF OFFICERS.

By a recent military order the chiefs of the respective bureaus will designate the officers to be assigned as Adjutant-General, Quartermaster, Commissary of Subsistence and Inspector-General for each army corps. Aids-de-Camp, authorized for corps commanders, are to be appointed by the President, with the consent of the Senate, on the recommendation of the Corps commanders.

COUNSEL FOR THE WAR DEPARTMENT.

Hon. WILLIAM WHITING, of Boston, has been retained by the Government, as adviser and special counsel of the War Department.

REVENUE DECISIONS.

The 75th section of the Excise Law, which provides that staves, hoops and hoddins shall not be regarded as manufactures within the meaning of the act, applies, according to the decision of the Commissioner, only to those articles in the rough, or when prepared and sold as staves, or hoops, or hoddins. Shooks, considered as hogsheads, barrels, or similar packages, taken to pieces, for greater convenience in packing, are subject to a duty of 3 per cent., as heretofore, as a manufacture not otherwise provided for.

REVENUE STAMPS.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue is prepared to furnish revenue stamps of every kind and denomination. Stamps which were ordered on or before the 24th instant will be forwarded during the present week.

NAVAL ORDER.

Acting-Assistant-Paymaster E. K. WEMPLE has been ordered to the steamer Massachusetts.

PAYMASTERS.

Seventy-three additional Paymasters have been recently appointed in the army.

By direction of President LINCOLN, twelve other Paymasters have been mustered out of the service for the following reasons:

First.—For making short payments, evading full settlements of just dues, and causing discontent and insubordination.

Second.—For being inaccurate and intemperate.

Third.—For want of energy and efficiency.

Fourth.—Being in too feeble health for efficient field service.

Fifth.—Being in too feeble health for efficient field service since March.

Sixth.—Being in too feeble health for efficient field service since July 24, and the want of common honesty.—For bankruptcy.

Seventh.—Incapacitated by old age and infirmities for field service, and for making false charges against the Government.

Eighth.—Having been inflicted with insanity. It would be improper to impose important responsibilities upon him.

Ninth.—Being too aged for efficient field service.

Eleventh.—Being feeble, old and not fit for field duty.

Twelfth.—Being sick and unfit for field duty, without any prospect of recovery this Winter.

The predecessor of Paymaster, who was too "aged for field service," had "lived his allotted span and had to give him a younger successor; but this fact, it appears, did not secure his retention in the service, and consequently he will no longer "stagger under the burden."

THE McDOWELL COURT OF INQUIRY.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Dec. 26.

Gen. STERN, in his cross-examination, having declined to give more explanations of his previous testimony, Gen. McDOWELL objected, and the Court went into secret session. Upon reopening, the Court decided, that Gen. STERN might make corrections of what he had already said, but that other explanations must be deferred until the close of the cross-examination.

He returned negative answers to the following questions:

Whether he did or did not know the strength of Ricketts's Division, which held Gap, assigned to him by general order which he (Stern) admitted to have seen, to the duty of overlooking Longstreet, or, or near Thoroughfare Gap.

Whether he knew or did not that the Rhode Island Cavalry had been sent up from New-Baltimore on the west side of Bull Run Ridge, to attack the enemy's flank, while he should be marching through Thoroughfare Gap.

Whether he knew or did not know that Sturgis's Division, two brigades of cavalry, under Gens. Bayard and Buford, had been sent to aid in the movement?

Being asked whether he thought the 11,000 or 12,000 men, of which this expedition under Gen. Ricketts consisted, were a sufficient provision to hold the enemy in check, he replied it was, if the troops had been moved at the right time to the right point.

THE FORTER COURT-MARTIAL.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Dec. 26.

Gen. FORTER presented, through his counsel, a written protest against the reception of certain evidence on the part of the Government, which he had deemed immaterial, and the Court due interest a few minutes to deliberate thereon.

On reopening the Court, the Judge-Advocate rendered a decision sustaining the course of the Government.

The first witness sworn was Lieut.-Col. F. T. LEONE, Assistant Adjutant-General and Chief of Gen. FORNEY's Staff. He was closely questioned in regard to an interview of Gen. McDOWELL with Gen. FORNEY, in which the former expressed his disapprobation of the position assigned by Gen. FORNEY to give battle to the enemy. He believed Gen. FORNEY to have shown cowardice, and to have pushed on from Warrenton to Bristow with all possible speed.

Capt. MASON, of the Third Massachusetts Battery, at that time commanding the division artillery of Maj.-Gen. MEADE, of Gen. FORNEY's corps, underwent a similar investigation, and verified the statements of the preceding witness.

Maj.-Gen. MEADE was next examined in relation to his movements whilst serving under Gen. FORNEY, but did not in any manner blame his commander.

NEWS FROM CALIFORNIA.

SAN FRANCISCO, Thursday, Dec. 25.

Arrived ship Southern Cross, Hong Kong, with date of November, 6.

The Southern Cross reports that the ship Wyoming, which sailed Oct. 24, was lost on Pirates' Shoal, on the 20th, with the largest cargo ever shipped from Hong Kong, for San Francisco. The crew and passengers were saved. Ship Flying Eagle, formerly sailing for this port, and the Gorge Lee was loading for the same destination. No commercial news from Hong Kong is published, but consignees say the Hong Kong market was unchanged.

A crew of teas, and drills, recently arrived here per ship Josephine, from Shanghaie, was seriously injured, and all will go to auction, on account of the underwriters.

SAN FRANCISCO, Friday, Dec. 26.

The ship R. F. Hoxie has been chartered to load dye-woods on the coast of Mexico.

Letters from Hong Kong, of the 9th ult., estimate the stock of cotton awaiting shipment for England at 50,000 bales. Two vessels were loading freight, the charge being one pound sterling per bale.

The cargo lost on the ship Wyoming comprised principally teas, sugar and rice, belonging mostly to Chinese merchants, and was valued at one and a quarter millions of dollars.

Advices from Japan, of Nov. 22, state that the American war-steamer Wyoming has created much admiration at Yeddo, receiving visits from the high Japanese officials. She sailed for Shanghai on the 23d. Several ships had recently sailed direct for London, with valuable cargoes of teas and silks.

Wealth of the Nation.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

YOUR correspondent, "A Veteran Observer," has fallen into a singular fallacy in his letter on the public wealth, which appears in the Times of Friday morning.

His object is to prove that "in the midst of this gigantic war we are actually increasing the national wealth at the rate of six hundred millions a year."

The opinion he has thus expressed may be true. I hope it can be proved. But at least it is contrary to all the views generally held on the subject. Waiving this inquiry, however, I wish to point out the logical defect which lurks in the argument of more usually accurate correspondent, as he has stated it.

First. He estimates the increase of the country at sixteen hundred millions of dollars a year, and that of the loyal States at nearly three-fourths of this amount.

Secondly. He supposes the destruction of wealth caused by the war to be four hundred and fifty millions a year.

And thirdly, he subtracts the latter of these two sums from the former, and then adds twelve hundred millions of surplus income to the loyal States.

Upon these steps in the argument I am intelligible, whether the estimates be correct or not. According to the data assumed, the yearly earnings of our people, after bearing the loss incident to the war, amount to seven hundred millions of dollars a year.

But your correspondent forgets that these very earnings are all the people have to live upon. Food and other necessaries have to be consumed. When the twenty-three millions of people in the loyal States have been provided for out of seven hundred millions of dollars, in them still a balance of six hundred millions to be added to the accumulated wealth of the nation!

If so, then each person will have to subsist on less than five dollars a year. Yours truly, G. M.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

—There is inexpressible pleasure, a singular feeling of satisfaction, and the content of a gratified longing, in plunging the thirsting buckets of the brain deep down into the wells of past ages, and bringing them up brimming with the luscious legendary waters that gather in the tombs of slumbering centuries. At the touches of these wells we do not always find truth, but mere bold veracity is not always the great desideratum, nor does it always present itself as the sum of human happiness to the inquiring mind. Courts of law occasionally dispense with it for convenience's sake, and its were in ambitious and unreasonable doubt indeed, who insisted upon its presence in his amusements as well as in his councils, and applied everything brought before him to its inexorable test. Shadowy fictions are at times decidedly preferable to a stern embodiment of fact. Readers of a subsequent period will have more pleasure in stories of the battles now raging than do we of the present. Deeds of arms gather magnitude as centuries crust upon them, and with that magnitude interest grows. It is quite probable that the Knights of King Arthur's Table, and the Peers and Paladins of CHARLEMAGNE'S Court, were held as slightly in their day as we estimate our own Colonels and Captains. But the helmets of Launcelot and Tristram, of Orlando, Rinaldo, Astolpho and Guiot the Dane, blaze brightly amid the golden mists of the mediæval ages, surrounded by a halo of dazzling glory. So with their loves. More of interest attaches to Launcelot and Genevieve than any one in the United Kingdom can manifest for the approaching marriage of the Prince of Wales, or any one in this disunited country feel in hymeneal crises in Mr. LINCOLN'S Cabinet. These remarks—not strictly relevant perhaps to the book itself—are suggested by The Legends of Charlemagne; or, Romance of the Middle Ages, published by J. R. TICKNOR & Co., of Boston. Mr. BULFINCH, the author, is already known to the public by two previous works, "The Age of Fable" and "The Age of Chivalry," to which the volume before us forms a most fitting corollary. The Court of CHARLEMAGNE is one with which the public generally is not familiar, and to the popular mind CHARLEMAGNE himself is more of a puzzle and a problem than even LOUIS NAPOLEON. Mr. BULFINCH introduces us to the grandson of him surnamed the Hammer, and to the Peers and Paladins, who to him stood in the light of crown jewels—quite as valuable, and infinitely more useful—in a series of legends gathered from all available sources—chiefly, the Italian poets and the "Romans de Chevalerie" of the Comte de TRESSAN. He makes us familiar with Malagigi, the magician, who stood on such good terms with demons that one always stood ready to his elbow, saddled and bridled, ready to mount or to be mounted, or in any way to do his bidding. And the reflection forces itself upon us, what a capital Prime Minister Malagigi would have made. Of course it is impossible to read of the achievements of Rinaldo putting thousands of Saracens to flight by the might of his unaided arm, without longing for his services in our army as Chief of Cavalry, or something of the kind—though granting we had the man, it might be difficult to get him appointed to a command, or promoted. The political influence judiciously exerted might manage this, and then, who his equal in Dividing the Mississippi? Leaving the moment from the office of Secretary of State or of the Interior, to attend to such little necessaries for marching armies as supplies and pontoon trains, STUART'S prestige would fade into utter insignificance, and the strategy of Lee and Jackson be shorn of their glory. But why rave with eager eyes to the shadowy vision of Rinaldo, albeit, helmed and helmeted, he looks out from the clear, beautiful page before us? For

"The knight is dust,
His sword is rust,
His soul is with God we trust."

Aside from the aggravation of reading of incomparable warriors and seeing them not, of knowing that such swords as "Duvindark" and "Excalibur" cannot be summoned to strike in the service of humanity, however dire the need for them, these legends of CHARLEMAGNE furnish eminently pleasant reading for the holidays. They blend in perfect harmony with the mistletoe and holly on the walls—like them, too, they seem to whisper from out the crypts of Time. With special adaptation of the book to suitability as a holiday present, the publishers give it in several styles of binding—English vellum, full Turkey, and half calf. Cheaper editions will come when the exigencies of the season are passed. In paper and print the work is a testimonial to the taste and skill of the University Press, as well as to the liberality and enterprise of the publishers. We omitted to mention that it is amply and handsomely illustrated, and that immense hippogriffs and griffins, with claws like exasperated cats, are to be seen charging through the air in full pursuit of knights who seem to them like mice.

—Messrs. J. E. TILTON & Co. are also the publishers of DARLEY'S new picture—"Morning, Noon and Night." The idea is represented by a smiling, crowing infant, a round-cheeked mother in the prime of life and maternal beauty, and an old man, with oaken staff, and "hose for his shrunk shanks a world too wide." The skillful pencil of our eminent artist has not been at fault in this instance, and in every line of the picture the author is readily recognizable. So imbued are the figures with life, that we fancy the careful listener might hear the baby crow, and the mother contentedly laugh as the old man praises it. "Morning, Noon and Twilight," however, had been a more fitting name for the picture—for old age is not the night of life. It is but that period of the day in which the shadows broaden and lengthen in the sky, while the sun seems for a moment to pause on the horizon before plunging down into the abyss whither the mortal eye follows not. The grave is the night which settles down upon human life, and its dark pall passes the pencil of any artist to paint, though a few have caught upon canvas the golden gleams of the Resurrection Morning beyond.

Maj.-Gen. Wright on the Slavery Question.

HOW IT IS TO BE MANAGED IN THE DEPARTMENT OF THE OHIO.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE OHIO, CINCINNATI, Ohio, Dec. 14, 1862.

GENERAL: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 11th inst., inclosing a communication from Messrs. Wm. BAYNE, D. C. WICKLIFFE and J. B. JAMESON, Regs., to you, transmitting a certain resolution, also herewith inclosed, which was passed at a popular meeting of the citizens of Fayette County, held at Lexington, Ky., on the 6th inst.

This resolution, which you have referred to me for action, contains certain interrogatories addressed to you, which are in substance as follows, viz.: "Does the military claim, or intend to assert, supremacy over the civil power in the Union State of Kentucky; if so, why, and to what extent; whether the forcible detention of certain slaves, belonging to the Union citizens of Kentucky, within the lines of regiments under your command, was authorized, and whether the same will be hereafter sanctioned or authorized, and, if so, under what law and for what purpose; also, requesting you to furnish the names of slaves so detained, and the regiments in which each is detained.

If I have been correctly informed in regard to the matter mentioned in said resolution, I must say that I think there was little occasion for this meeting of the citizens of Fayette County, called to give public expression to their supposed grievances. Yet, I am ready to believe that they were the result of patriotic, praiseworthy motives, prompted by a desire to prevent conflicts between the civil and military, in a country where such conflicts are supposed to exist. Adverting, then, to assertions attributed to the Union Citizens of Fayette County, that the forces which are now in Kentucky, under your jurisdiction, are for the defence of the Union against the assaults of the rebels, shall be, as far as its officers are concerned, the conservators of the civil power. I may confidently point to the general sentiment of my forces as proof of this disposition on the part of both officers and men. Every assurance to this effect has been given; and the admission in the resolution that the complaint apply to only "a few of the regiments" is good evidence of this fact.

While admitting, without hesitation, the purity of the motives which prompted the citizens of Fayette County to adopt this resolution, I am desirous to know against what law and for what purpose they have called upon you to furnish them the names of the slaves in each regiment, and the regiment in which each is detained.

You may assure the Committee of the popular assemblage, that, so far as I am concerned, no law of Kentucky, nor its construction of the laws of Congress, shall be violated; that any force at my command shall be ready to serve to preserve law and order, at the call of the Executive of Kentucky; but that no regiment or officers of my command shall be diverted by orders to hunt up runaway negroes. The events around them will show our friends in Kentucky that this is not to be expected or desired from us.

You ask further desire them on my part, should this be necessary, that, so long as the civil power is in operation, the military shall be subservient to it. This is not only in accordance with the spirit of our institutions, but it is in obedience to the doctrines taught us in the military code. The civil power is supreme.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
H. G. WRIGHT, Major-General Commanding.

Maj.-Gen. GRANGER, commanding Army of Kentucky, Lexington, Ky.

AFFAIRS IN THE WEST.

How the War has Affected Chicago—The Currency Question—Meeting of the Legislature—Business Affairs.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

CHICAGO, Monday, Dec. 22, 1862.

In the revulsion of 1857, Chicago, as well as all the Western towns, received a severe blow. Speculation had carried the price of everything—real estate particularly—to such a height that the sudden fall was terribly crushing to thousands of our citizens. Then came five years of poor crops throughout the West, adding greatly to our embarrassments. We were recovering slowly from the effects of these, when the great rebellion burst upon us. One of its first effects in this State was to destroy the value of about five millions of currency, based upon Southern stocks. Everybody felt that this additional ruin was almost irrecoverable. But our people passed through the ordeal, and sustained themselves admirably, although great embarrassment was produced by this wholesale depreciating of our circulating medium.

But time passed. An abundant crop blessed the labors of the husbandman. A new currency took the place of the old. Financially everything gradually came to rights, and our trade relations were never in so good a condition as they have been during the past eighteen months.

In the meantime the rebellion progressed and became formidable. The Mississippi was closed against the commerce of the Northwest. The trade which had previously found an outlet at St. Louis or New-Orleans, must seek a new channel to the Atlantic markets. The railroads centering at Chicago touch the Mississippi at eight different points, extending over a space of five hundred miles, viz.: Prairie du Chien, Dunleith, Fulton City, Rock Island, Burlington, Quincy, St. Louis and Cairo. The entire length of the productive State of Iowa, and penetrating far into the interior was reached by these roads. The result has been a heavy increase of the business of Chicago in all departments of trade. The war, instead of being a damage to us, has actually been the means of increasing our general prosperity. The best business men of many of the Eastern cities, Boston, St. Louis and Louisville—have come among us, and are now actively engaged in the various branches of commerce. Last Spring it was more particularly manifested that our population was decidedly on the increase from the demand for materials, and from the large number of new buildings which were put under contract.

A census has recently been taken by the city, for school purposes, which shows a gratifying result. The population of Chicago is 122,759, and by adding two or three suburbs, which are substantially a part of the city, the number reaches 127,026. This shows an increase in the city proper of a little over 22,000 since the census of 1860—much the largest proportion of which has been realized during the past year.

The business of Chicago has increased in a much great ratio than has its population. The wholesale dry goods and grocery trade for 1862 is larger by 50 per cent. than that of 1861. The grain trade, owing to the short crop of the present season, does not show so large an advance; but will exceed that of last year by 6,000,000 bushels. The pork packing business, thus far, shows an increase equal to about 110 per cent. But it is enough to say, generally, that Chicago was never more really prosperous—that its growth was never more healthy—that its business was never on a better foundation than in this, the second year of the rebellion. For this we are indebted to our location, commercially; and to the circumstance, that under the existing state of things trade cannot avoid us. And our merchants and business men generally have prepared themselves to meet the necessities of the times and the demands upon them.

There is some anxiety in the West, in relation to the national finances, with especial reference to the circulating medium. The Government demand notes, next to gold or silver, are preferred by our people. And there is a general desire that they should become a permanent National currency. Bank notes we have in great profusion; but as those are based upon "confidence," and as not a fourth part of those afloat could be promptly redeemed, they are looked upon with more or less distrust. And yet they readily pass from hand to hand. If one, however, has a spare dollar or so to lay aside, the green backs are put in requisition. It may be that the Legislature of this State will so far amend the law of this State requiring gold and silver alone for taxes, as to authorize the receiving of United States treasury notes. It would certainly do so, had the Republicans the majority; but, as it is, it is doubtful. Hard money and the negro are the principal items in the Egyptian's political creed, and with their adhesion to the specie hobby, and, perhaps, with a desire to embarrass the Administration, it is problematical whether the people are afforded any relief in this matter. If not, the collection of the State taxes for the coming year will be no easy job, and the deficit will be large. People do not admire paying from twenty to thirty per cent. premium for gold, when they have that which they have been obliged to receive as a legal tender in their pockets.

Our Legislature meets in two weeks. The first business will probably be the election of a United States Senator. I have seen no reason to change the opinion that RICHARDSON will be the man. The Northern Democrats will mostly go for him. Gov. YATES will receive the complimentary vote of the Republicans.

I have been unable to obtain any intelligence in relation to the action of the Pacific Railroad Commissioners. The books of subscription were to have been opened in November, but the public have not been advised of the result. I anticipate a failure under the present auspices; and, under the circumstances of the country, it would seem to be impossible to carry forward such a gigantic enterprise.

Business is still active, and everything, commercially, appears to be moving forward satisfactorily. Weather favorable, with little or no snow yet.

A Cannack on Gen. McNeil.

Those who have unlimited confidence in the veracity of the Toronto Leader, may, if they choose to do so, believe the following stories which it tells regarding the execution of "ten Confederate citizens" by Gen. McNeil. It says it has the statement from eye-witnesses of the execution, well-known citizens of Palmyra:

"One of the ten condemned had a wife and several children dependent upon him for support. His wife went to Gen. McNEIL and entreated him to spare her husband's life, telling him that she was in ill health, that her children were all sickly, and entirely helpless, and that without their father they would be thrown upon the world, entirely dependent upon the public for support, and that her relatives were all in Northern country, and little able to give her assistance. McNEIL tried to put her away with such ceremony expressions as—'Go away, woman, I want no more of your snivling here,' or, 'Your husband is a rebel, and should be hung,' and such like language; but finally he said, that if the wife could find anyone who would die in her husband's place, he would release him and spare his life. This hard condition of release destroyed all hope, for who could say one was willing to lay his life in such an emergency? The wife went away with a heavy heart. A short time before the hour appointed for the massacre, a young man, 19 or 20 years of age, signified his willingness to take the place of the man whose family was dependent upon him, saying that he had no relatives, no friend, that he was aware of; that none were dependent upon him, and that after his death he would not be missed, while it would be a serious thing to have one shot whose family, in consequence, would be left alone and uncared for. He was taken as a substitute, agreeably to promise, and gave up his life along with the others on that fatal day.

Another case among the ten was that of a man with a wife and one child, a boy nine or ten years of age. The mother was lying on a sick bed and unable to go to the commanding officer and intercede for her doomed husband. The little boy went to McNEIL and in the fullness of his affection for his father, entreated, begged and implored him to spare the life of his father, telling how much he loved him, how good a father he had always been, and how kind he had been to his mother; that his father had never done anything wrong, and that without crime there should be no punishment. Said the nearly little fellow: 'I don't know how mother and me will get along if you kill my father. I know that he did not help to take Mr. ALLEMAN away, for he was na. absent from home for a month before the night that the soldiers came and took him out of bed away from mother and me. Father has just got an orchard made for me, and was going to build a new and better house than the one we have been living in. We'll be very lonely without him, and I don't know how mother will stand it without him. But says that I will some day be a man and then I will be able to support and protect her, but that will be a good while yet. I know, General, when you think of these things that you will not kill my father.' In such language he urged the release of his father, but in this case McNEIL was unrelenting, and would not release the father, but consented that the boy should ride out with him to the place of execution. When the wagons passed through the streets with the doomed men and their coffins, the little boy was seen sitting on his father's knee, and clinging to him, as if determined to not let him go. It is said that when they arrived at the place for the execution and the men were placed in line, it was with the utmost difficulty that they dragged the boy away from his father's embrace, clinging as they did so closely together. The father died with his companions, and when his remains were put into the rough coffin and hauled back through the town, the little boy was seen seated upon the rude box that contained all that was left of his kind and guiltless father."

THE CASE OF WEST VIRGINIA.

Opinion of Attorney-General Bates.

It is understood that the President, in his action upon the bill now in his hands, for the admission of West Virginia as a separate State, will be guided mainly by the question of the constitutionality of the measure, as indicated by the Attorney-General. Mr. BATES has already given his opinion in the case. It was written in reply to a question of a member of the West Virginia Convention, in session at Wheeling, a year and a half ago. He puts the case clearly and forcibly, and it will be seen he is opposed to the creation of a new State, at this period of time. It is probable, under these circumstances, that the President will veto the bill.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL'S OFFICE, Aug. 12, 1861.

Hon. A. F. Ritchie, Virginia Convention, Wheeling:

SIR: Your letter of the 9th instant was received within this hour, and as you ask an immediate answer, you of course, will not expect me to go elaborately into the subject.

I have thought a great deal upon the question of dividing the State of Virginia into two States; and since I came here, as a member of the Government, I have conversed with a good many, and corresponded with some, of the good men of Western Virginia in regard to that matter. In all this intercourse, my constant and earnest effort has been to impress upon the minds of those gentlemen the vast importance—not to say necessity—in this terrible crisis of our National affairs, to abstain from the introduction of any new elements of revolution, to avoid, as far as possible, all new and original theories of Government; but, on the contrary, in all the insurgent Commonwealths to adhere, as closely as circumstances will allow, to the old constitutional standard of principle, and the settlement of States and thoughts of the people. And I still think that course is dictated by the best wisdom of prudence.

The Government of Virginia, in Western Virginia is an original, indeed, a brand new set of revolution. It has not even the power of precedent. It does not call it right—for it is never prescribed, it exists in force only, and has and can have no law but the will of the revolutionists.) Any attempt to carry it out involves a plain breach of both the Constitutions of Virginia and the nation. And hence it is plain that you cannot take that course without weakening, if not destroying, your claims upon the sympathy and support of the General Government; and without concerting the plan already adopted both by Virginia and the General Government, for the reorganization of the revolted States, and the restoration of the integrity of the Union. That plan, I understand to be this: When a State, by its internal functionaries, has declared itself out of the Union, we will recognize of all the sound and loyal elements of the State—all who own allegiance to and claim protection of the Constitution, to form a State Government as nearly as may be, upon the former model; and claiming to be the very State which has been, in part, overthrown by the successful rebellion. In this way we establish a constitutional nucleus around which all the shattered elements of the Commonwealth may meet and combine, and thus restore the old State to its original integrity.

This, I verily thought, was the plan adopted at Wheeling, and recognized and acted upon by the General Government here. Your Convention has nullified the secession ordinance by proceeding at Richmond, both in the Convention and General Assembly, and your new Governor formally demanded of the President the fulfillment of the constitutional guarantee in favor of Virginia—Virginia as known to our fathers and to us. The President admitted the obligation and promised his best efforts to fulfill it; and the Senate admitted your Senators, not as representing a new and baseless State, now for the first time heard of in our history, but as representing "the good old Commonwealth."

Must all this be undone, and a new and hazardous experiment be ventured upon, at the moment when difficulties and difficulties are thickening around us? I hope not; for the sake of the Nation and the State, I hope not. I had rejoiced in the movement in Western Virginia, as a legal, constitutional and safe refuge from revolution and anarchy, as at once an example and its instrument for the restoration of all the revolted States.

I have not time now to discuss the subject in its various bearings. What I have written, is written with a running pen, and will need your charitable criticism.

If I had time I think I could give persuasive reasons for declining the attempt to create a new State at this perilous time. At another time, I might be willing to go fully into the question, but now I can say no more. Most respectfully, your ob't serv't, EDW. BATES.

The London Confederate States Aid Society.

Mr. GEORGE THOMPSON, M. P., writes from London to the Boston Liberator:

I have just become aware of the existence of a society in London, calling itself "The London Confederate States Aid Society." It professes to be organized by Englishmen, and has issued an address "To the British Public and all Sympathizers in Europe." I have procured a copy of this document. The night before last the Association held a meeting at its office, No. 4 Devonshire-street, Portland-place, near the American Embassy. Having a meeting of my own in the same hour, I sent Wendell Phillips, who attended, and took an active part in the proceedings. Mr. Confederate Commissioner MASON, of Fugitive Slave Law notoriety, was present. On the announcement of that person from the meeting, he was greeted at the door by men exhibiting a placard, three feet long by two feet wide, in which was represented a negro in tattered garments, with an iron collar round his neck. Beneath the figure were the words:

"Dumas Wade, of Montgomery County, Mo., as he appeared when, after two months hiding in the woods, he was rescued by a party of Federal soldiers," &c., &c.

And, then, the following:

"Fellow-countrymen! remember that the 'Southern chivalry,' which asks your sympathy and admiration, is composed of the wretches who perpetrate these atrocities on the weak and defenceless. Will you not, with a spirit worthy of the sons of freedom, rather give your moral support to the men who are shedding their blood (as thirty years ago you gave £20,000,000 of money) to purge the nation from the foul shame and guilt of complicity with Slavery."

The Fugitive Slave Law Ex-Senator, and now rebel Commissioner, on beholding this placard,

"Grinned horribly a ghastly smile," and, as soon as he was able, got beyond sight of the apparition of DUMAS WADE!

THE REBEL ADDRESS.

The address of the Confederate States Aid Association is a virtual appeal for pecuniary contributions, to enable the rebels to "continue their war against their unscrupulous enemies." It begins by charging the North with having "insulted, imprisoned, flogged, violated and outraged the women of the South in the most inhuman and savage manner." Further, "the North, in executing their fiendish and demoniacal purpose, are bent on mischief, robbery, murder, arson and crimes of the most revolting nature, glutting their hellish rage by inflicting every kind of torture, spreading wild ruin, devastation, destruction and universal desolation, for the purpose of revenge and hatred. In their fury, prudence and wisdom, the authorities, civil and military, have ordered that the property of the Southern people in the kingdom of the world." After much more of the same sort, Englishmen are invoked, in the name of "Christianity, justice, peace, liberty, (!) humanity and Christianity, to arouse themselves to arrest the barbarity of the blood-stained march of tyranny, and to rush to the aid of the South with—their purses, shillings and pounds."

This anti-climax is followed by an appeal to the women of our country. Here are the words:

"Patriot and heed of Faith! For the sake of violated humanity and the honor of your sex, come in woman's majesty and omnipotence, and give strength to a cause that has for its object the highest time—the amelioration and exaltation of humanity."

This address is followed by a statement of the case of the North against the South, which is thus put: The non-execution of the Fugitive Slave law was a virtual dissolution of the Union, and wherever the South from their allegiance to the national compact. The Republican Party is a political conspiracy, and Mr. LINCOLN "the head of vigilant committees, under a higher law than the laws of the land." The South "is invaded by hordes of mercenaries, collected from the scum of almost every nation." "The South has no rival either in commerce or in glory. England's sea [illegible] has started the South, while it has paralyzed the North. The conduct of the South should extort [illegible] admiration of all lovers of law and order, and, finally, the South implores England, with tears, to help her own children."

The McKinstry Court-Martial—Important Testimony of Gen. Harney—Charges Now Vs. F. P. Blair with Treason.

In the McKinstry Court-Martial at St. Louis, on Tuesday, Gen. HARNEY was called by the defence. After several preliminary questions, he was asked:

Was or was not the performance of duty here by yourself and staff, on the breaking out of the rebellion, attended with great difficulty in consequence of persons not connected with the War Department claiming and exercising control over yourself and staff?

Gen. H. replied:

Yes. This influence was exercised by Frank Blair to such an extent that it caused me to be removed from the command of the Department of the West—in consequence of the base falsehoods which he fabricated and communicated to the Administration through his brother, Montgomery Blair. His influence was such with Gen. Lyon that I never communicated with Gen. Lyon at all. I communicated with Frank Blair. I knew Gen. Lyon was entirely under the influence of Frank Blair—entirely.

The Court at this point was ordered to be cleared, objection being made by counsel for the accused, in the form of the accusation. After half an hour's deliberation, the Court was reopened, and the decision announced that the answer should stand as follows: "Yes."

Q.—If the persons who interfered with your command, at any time interfered, or attempted to interfere or control the purchase of supplies by the accused, please so state.

A.—I remember, on one occasion, a person wrote to Quartermaster McKinstry, asking him to give a certain person a certain contract, at a certain price; don't know what the contract was, nor who the person was that wrote. I received it, now when the person was. The Mayor showed me the note in reply, which I read. I told him to abide by the regulations entirely, and not depart from them without authority from the commanding officer. He replied, "Certainly; besides I can get these articles at nearly one-half less than he wants me to pay for them." The author of this note was Col. Frank Blair. It has been so long since, that I do not remember another instance. I presume this put a stop to any further interference while I was in command of the Department.

From Gen. HARNEY'S testimony, it also appears that he was relieved from the command of the Western Department May 25, 1861. The order for his removal was dated May 16, but was not delivered to him until May 25. Several days after his removal he received the following letter from the War Department, addressed to him as the then Commanding General of the Department:

ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE, WASHINGTON, May 27, 1861.

Brig.-Gen. W. S. Harney, Commanding Department of the West, St. Louis, Mo.:

SIR: The President observes with concern that, notwithstanding the pledges of the State authorities to cooperate in preserving peace in Missouri, loyal citizens continue to be driven from their houses. It is immaterial whether these outrages continue from disability or indisposition on the part of the State authorities to prevent them; it is enough that they continue to devolve on you the duty of putting a stop to them summarily, by the force under your command, to be aided by such troops as you may require from Kansas, Iowa and Illinois. The professions of loyalty to the Union by the State authorities of Missouri are not to be rested upon. They have already falsified their professions too often, and are too far committed to secession to be entitled to your confidence, and you can only be sure of their desisting from their wicked purposes, when it is out of their power to prosecute them.

You will, therefore, be unceasingly watchful of their movements, and will permit the absence of their partisans and opponents of the wise measures already taken, to prevent you from checking any movement against the Government, however disguised under the pretended State authority.

The authority of the United States is paramount, and whenever it is opposed, whether by order of State authority or not, you will not hesitate to uphold it.

I am, Sir, respectfully, your ob't serv't,
(Signed) L. THOMAS, Adj't Gen.

To the above letter Gen. HARNEY returned the following reply:

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 5, 1861.

GENERAL: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 27th ultimo, containing instructions to put down by force attempts to commit outrages upon loyal citizens of Missouri.

In reply to that letter, I respectfully refer you to my communication of the 20th ultimo, written and mailed before the receipt of yours. I therein informed the Government that I had reliable means of obtaining information of the movements of the State authorities, and that I should promptly punish any violation of agreement, and put down any attempt at rebellion.

The many complaints of individuals by letter, setting forth that acts of oppression have been committed by the Secessionists, have received my careful attention, and an investigation has proved the majority of them to be without foundation. Your Government has been imposed upon by the exaggerations of these mischievous rumors. I cite the report, which obtained currency, that Ex-Gov. SEWARD and other loyal citizens have been driven from St. Joseph, and the Ex-Governor promptly published an unqualified denial that such an outrage was perpetrated, clearly proves that there is a disposition on the part of some parties to manufacture excitement where cause does not exist.

My confidence in the honor and integrity of Gen. PRICE, in the purity of his motives and his loyalty to the Government, remains unimpaired.

His course as President of the State Convention that voted by a large majority against submitting an ordinance of secession, and his efforts since that time to calm the elements of discord, have served to confirm the high opinion of him I have for many years entertained. My whole course as Commander of the Department of the West has been dictated by a desire to carry out in good faith the instructions of my Government, regardless of the clamor of the conflicting elements surrounding me, and whose advice and dictation could be followed without involving the State in blood and the Government in the unnecessary expenditure of millions. Under the course I pursued, Missouri was secured to the Union, and the triumph of the Government was only the more glorious for being almost a bloodless victory. But those who clamored for blood have not ceased to impugn my motives. Twice, within a brief space of time, have I been relieved from command here—the second time is a manner that has inflicted unmerited disgrace upon a true and loyal soldier. During a long life, devoted entirely to my profession, I have never been so treated, and more than once I have held her honor in my hands, and during that time my loyalty, I believe, was never questioned. And now, when in the natural course of things, I shall, before the lapse of many years, lay aside the sword which has so long served my country, my country-men will be slow to believe that I have chosen this portion of my career to damn with treason my life, which is so soon to become a record of the past, and which I shall most willingly leave to the unbiased judgment of posterity. I trust I may yet be spared to do my country some further service that will justify to the love I bear her, and that the vigor of my arm may never be palsied while there is a blow to be struck in her defence. I respectfully ask to be assigned to the command of the Department of California, and I doubt not the present commander of that division is even now anxious to serve on the Atlantic frontier.

I am, Sir, very respectfully, your ob't serv't,
W. S. HARNEY,
Brigadier-General, U. S. A.

To L. THOMAS, Adjutant-General, U. S. A., Washington.

PERSONAL.

—"A prophet is not without honor save in his own country," and Wm. Cornwell Jewett, the boon companion and intimate friend of the Emperor Louis Napoleon, is no exception to the rule. Thus the Denver Commonwealth, of Colorado Territory, whence W. Cornwell hails, says:

"He has about as much right to hail from the moon as from this Territory. He never was here but once—in the Summer of 1860—and we venture to assert that he won't show his head here again. He was formerly an auctioneer in Chicago, and ran away from that city and his creditors. He is a swindler and a thief, besides being a crazy fool, in whom there is excessive self-admiration and emptiness. He insults the Territory of Colorado every time he writes his name, for he never writes it without appending the lie—'of Colorado Territory.' While in this Territory, in 1860, his father-in-law denounced him through the Press for what he was, and refused publicly to be responsible for his debts or his liabilities. He published letters which he had received from his wife just before her death—letters which should have been eternally sacred—in order to bring himself into notice and to get people to trust him."

—A woman named Margaret Oamer, who eloped from Harrisburg, Penn., some months since with an [illegible], leaving her husband and two small children, has just turned up in this city. On the complaint of her husband she was arrested and committed to jail on a charge of adultery, in default of $1,000 bail.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

Obsequies of Officers Killed at Fredericksburgh.

All yesterday morning the bodies of Col. BULL, of the Sixty-sixth Regiment; Capt. DOMAS, of the Sixty-sixth, and Capt. HOAGLAND, of the Twelfth, laid in state in the Governor's Room at the City Hall. These deceased officers bravely fell while leading their men in the terrible charge at Fredericksburgh. The remains are inclosed in handsome coffins, on which are silver plates bearing the following inscriptions:

Col. JAMES H. BULL,
64th Regiment, N. Y. V.
Killed in action,
Fredericksburgh, Dec. 13, 1862.
Aged 40 years.

Capt. JAMES F. DOMAS,
Company B, 66th Regiment, N. Y. V.
Killed in action,
Fredericksburgh, Dec. 13, 1862.
Aged 26 years and 6 months.

Capt. WM. H. HOAGLAND,
Company D, 12th Regiment N. Y. V.,
Killed in action,
Fredericksburgh, Va., Dec. 13, 1862.
Aged 32 years and 9 months.

As a guard of honor, a portion of Company F, Sacketts-Harbor Regiment, N. Y. S. M. G., were on duty from an early hour. An immense number of people thronged the passages leading to the Governor's Room in their anxiety to view the bodies. The religious ceremonies appropriate to the occasion commenced at 2½ o'clock. Chaplain DYMOND, of the Sixty-sixth Regiment, officiated. At the conclusion of the funeral service the coffins were taken to the hearses waiting for them, and were then escorted in procession through some of the principal streets of the City. The Seventy-first Regiment, N. Y. S. M. G., acted as military escort. The procession proceeded through Broadway, Chambers and Centre streets to the east gate of the Park, across the Park, and down Broadway to the Hamilton-avenue Ferry, in the subjoined order:

Police.
Seventy-first Regiment, Guard of Honor, eight men.
Hearse containing body of Col. BULL.

PALL BEARERS:

Col. Pinckney, Abram Marks,
Gr. Demarest, A. S. Howe,
Capt. Nelson, Chas. A. Dargin,
Dr. W. J. McDermott, Miles S. Andrus.

Hearse containing body of Capt. DOMAS.

PALL-BEARERS.

Capt. Hasslin, Sixty-sixth, Clement H. Sommers,
Capt. Bell, Fifty-seventh, Robert C. Gwyer,
Capt. Leonhardt, late 8th, David J. Levy,
12th-sixth.
Capt. Lynch, Sixty-third.

Hearse containing body of Capt. HOAGLAND.

PALL-BEARERS.

Capt. Maury, Eighty-eighth, Edwin Harris,
Capt. Gorman, One Hundred and Twenty-fifth, Charles W. Hayt
Capt. Tuthey, Sixty-third, Wm. H. Thom,
Capt. J. L. Waugh, late Eleventh.

Common Council in carriages.
Family of deceased in carriages.
Officers of the army.
Officers of the First Division.
Society of Ashlanders.

The bodies of Col. BULL and Capt. HOAGLAND were conveyed to Greenwood Cemetery for interment. A parting volley was fired over their graves by the military escort. Capt. DOMAS's remains, accompanied by the Society of Ashlanders, were taken to the depôt of the Hudson River Railroad, and are to be sent on to Newburgh for interment.

To-morrow afternoon, at 1 o'clock, the funeral of Major HOGAN, of the Irish Brigade, will take place from the head recruiting office of the brigade, No. 560 Broadway. Gen. MEAGHER, under whose personal supervision the remains were brought home, will, if the severe ulcer on his knee does not peremptorily enforce confinement, be present at the funeral, when he and all the officers of the command now in the City will each wear in their caps a sprig of fresh boxwood, such as was worn by each member of the brigade—from its gallant General to its smallest drummer—on the field on which the deceased, in charging the enemy, nobly fell. The friends of the deceased, and officers and soldiers of other military organizations, are respectfully invited to join in the last worldly tribute to the memory of this gallant field-officer of the Irish Brigade.

The Recent Homicide in the Nineteenth Precinct.

SEQUEL OF THE CORONER'S INQUEST.

Coroner COLLIN yesterday held an inquest at Bellevue Hospital, on the body of Michael Manley, who was fatally stabbed in the neck, by a knife said to be in the hands of Owen Kenny.

The testimony adduced showed that deceased and James Manley were brakemen on the Harlem Railroad, and lived at Dover Plain. At 2 o'clock on Thursday morning, they entered the porter-house of Mrs. Rogers, Forty-fifth-street, near Fourth-avenue, to get some beer. While there, Henry entered the place, with his little son, and also called for some liquor. Kenny, who had just returned from Church, appeared to be intoxicated, and for that reason Mrs. Rogers refused to give him anything to drink. This irritated him, and he soon became very troublesome. He vainly tried to pick a quarrel with deceased, and at last struck him in the face with his fist. Manley then interfered and received a heavy blow on the nose from Kenny. A general fight soon ensued in which other parties took a hand, and Manley receiving a severe cut on his neck got away and hid behind the door. The fight still continued, and before it was over, Manley was stabbed in the neck, and soon afterward died from hemorrhage. Patrolman the Nineteenth Ward Police were on hand and arrested Kenny.

After the Coroner had exhausted all the testimony, the case was submitted, and the jury rendered a verdict "that Michael Manley came to his death by a stab wound in the neck, and so far as the evidence adduced shows, we believe at the hands of Owen Kenny." The prisoner was committed to the Tombs to await his trial. Kenny bears a very bad reputation, and is well known to the Nineteenth Ward Police, who have frequently arrested him. During a brutal fight in which he was engaged, Kenny bit off the ear of his victim.

The remains of Manley were taken back to Dover Plains for interment. He has left a widow and several children.

Sword Presentation to Gen. Hatch.

Gen. JOHN P. HATCH was for a long time Chief of Cavalry in Gen. BANKS' Corps, composing an effective portion of the Army of Virginia. While in that position he had general charge of the many cavalry reconnoissances which were made by Gen. BANKS' Cavalry during the time he was in command of the corps. The General was, some time ago, elected to the command of an infantry brigade, of which the celebrated old Fourteenth of Brooklyn forms a part. While Chief of Cavalry, the First Vermont, Col. TOWNSEND, and Fifth New-York, Col. DE FORREST, were used by him for scouting parties and reconnoissances perhaps quite as often as any other regiments of cavalry under his command, and therefore, with a view to a moderate expression of their esteem for him as a gentleman, and as a General, while under his command, the officers of the two Cavalry Regiments named, have caused to be manufactured a splendid sabre, with dress and field sword-belts, and a sash and belt, to be presented to him. The presentation is to be made on behalf of the donors, by Capt. CRESSY, of the Fifth New-York and Lieut. GROVER of the First Vermont. The inscription is as follows:

To
Gen. JOHN P. HATCH
From
Officers of the Fifth New-York and First Vermont Cavalry.

Grand Dinner of the New-York City Assembly Delegation at the Astor House.

Yesterday at 3 o'clock the City Assembly delegation met at the Astor House, by the purpose of having a nice dinner, and to talk over matters, preparatory to assembling in Albany on Jan. 4. There was much good feeling evidenced, and an entire absence of bickering of any kind. Mr. THOS. C. FINLAY, of the Twelfth Ward, presided, and was made Chairman of the delegation. After remarks by Messrs. LOVEJOY, WADE and others, it was unanimously resolved to present the name of Ex-Judge GRAHAM DEAN as the candidate of the New-York Democracy for Speaker of the House of Assembly. There were many politicians awaiting the action of the meeting, and much interest manifested in its results. There will evidently be lively times in Albany this Winter.

Naval.

LAUNCH OF THE MARINE MONSTER "WHAT IS IT?"

We have on several occasions referred to the peculiar naval structure, the What Is It? which, for some months past has been growing into form under the hands of the Government employes. This singular affair has attracted considerable attention, as no one knows in what manner it is to be made available for warlike purposes. At present it is nothing more than a large box with thick sides, and an interval space for a gun. When afloat, however, it will be clothed with iron some inches in thickness. Its armament will consist of one piece of ordnance, from which will be discharged a projectile of an unconceivable nature as the battery itself. This armament is now in New-York, being rifled, it is said. The inventor of the What Is It? as the workmen and visitors have christened this freak of naval architecture, is, as stated some months since, Lieut. HUNT. To-day proper preparations will be made to float the machine off satisfactorily. It will be launched in the forenoon.

A Prize Beyond Barnum's Reach.

BARNUM'S MUSEUM, Dec. 26, 1862.

Miss Lavinia Warren:

Understanding that you do not leave for Europe so soon as you anticipated, I write this to say that I will give you One Thousand Dollars if and if you will exhibit in my Museum next week, commencing Monday, Dec. 29, and closing Saturday, Jan. 3. Or I will give you Five Thousand Dollars to exhibit for the consecutive weeks, in this city, on the subject-inquiries. My desire is to have you and our little Commodore Nutt appear on the platform together, in order that the public may see a fully endowed lady and gentleman arm in arm, whose united weight is less than ANY people. Answer by the bearer, and oblige. Truly yours, P. T. B

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

From the headquarters of the Army of the Potomac we learn that there is no news worth telegraphing.

Winchester has once more been evacuated by the rebels and occupied by National troops. Col. Kane moved from Romney and occupied the place on Tuesday morning. The rebel Gen. Jones, with 2,500 men, had occupied the place the week previous, but had gone toward Staunton. The Winchester Railroad has been entirely destroyed and the iron carried away.

The Commissioner appointed by the Government to investigate frauds perpetrated upon the Treasury, in the raising and organizing of regiments in this City, has already discovered frauds to the extent of over $700,000, and the prospect is that double that sum will be detected before the investigation is concluded. The manner in which the frauds were perpetrated is fully exposed in another column. It displays a depth of villainy and wide-spread corruption, among a people claiming to be patriotic, that is perfectly astounding.

On Dec. 14 Capt. Birch, with about one hundred men, succeeded in destroying the rebel saltpetre works at Yellville, Ark. He took Capt. P. S. McNamara and twenty-three men prisoners, destroying about thirty stand of arms, five hundred pounds of dried beef, and a complete supply of provisions for the Winter for a full company, burning five good buildings, &c., &c., belonging to the works. There was a fine steam engine of eight horse power, ten kettles containing one hundred and twenty gallons each, sixteen containing fifty gallons each, six large tanks, full sets of blacksmiths' and carpenters' and joiners' tools, together with $6,000 worth of saltpetre. The capacity of the Cave was such as to employ one hundred hands, turning out four hundred pounds daily, which the Confederate Government valued at forty cents per pound at the Cave. The works cost the rebels $30,000. They were completely destroyed, by order of Capt. Birch—the men wielding the sledge hammers with right good will in breaking the enormous kettles and smashing pieces.

Brig.-Gen. A. P. Hovey has issued a congratulatory order to the troops engaged in the recent expedition into the interior of Mississippi. It reads thus: "The General commanding the expedition to Mississippi desires to express to the officers and soldiers under his command, his gratification for the cheerfulness and bravery displayed by them during the expedition. Though exposed, without tents, to cold rains, and compelled to march over heavy roads, they have accomplished one of the most remarkable marches made during the war, penetrating to the very hearts of the enemy's country, cutting their roads and safely returning, though hedged in on both sides by greatly superior numbers. This has been done with the alacrity and cheerfulness of true soldiers; and the General commanding takes pride in announcing to you that the object of the expedition has been fully accomplished. Brig.-Gen. Washburne's energy and skill deserve particular mention."

Gen. J. G. Blunt, who assisted in gaining the great victory over the rebels at Fayetteville, Ark., has issued an appeal to the people of Kansas for clothing and food for the refugee Indians in the vicinity of Fort Scott.

The Lexington (Mo.) Union has commenced the publication of a roll of all persons in that section who have given aid and comfort to the rebels.

The Fort Scott Bulletin (Kansas) notices the presentation of a flag to Company E, First United States Infantry, Capt. R. H. Offley. Capt. Offley is a New-Yorker by birth, and was appointed from this State in May, 1857. This is the only instance in which any company in the regular service has received such a testimonial, and is a high tribute to the efficiency of the company receiving it.

GENERAL NEWS.

By the arrival at Halifax of the steamship Europa, we have advices from Europe one week later. She left Liverpool on the 13th, and Queenstown on the 14th inst. The English news by this arrival is not important. It was reported that the war steamer Ariadne had been ordered to leave Halifax and join Admiral Milne's squadron at Bermuda. The Shipping Gazette intimates that a concentration of Admiral Milne's force is to be made with a view to prevent what is termed outrages on British commerce. In Paris, unfavorable rumors were again current regarding the French in Mexico. An urgent call for reinforcements was said to have been made, which would be sent under the device of establishing a reserve at Martinique. Gen. Prim had made lengthy explanations in the Spanish Cortes regarding affairs in Mexico. Confidential letters were read by him, containing strange details. According to these letters, Almonte was authorized by Napoleon and the Archduke Maximilian himself to put the latter forward as a candidate for the throne of Mexico. Gen. Prim expressed the opinion that the French expedition would not be successful. A slight advance had taken place in the Liverpool Cotton market. Breadstuffs and Provisions were flat. Consols were quoted at 93¼@93⅝.

Official information has reached Washington that the condition of the French Army of Invasion in Mexico is most critical. Its ranks are being thinned by sickness and the want of wholesome food, and it is said that agents have been sent to this country to obtain supplies—the furnishing of which has been protested against by the Mexican Minister. It is understood, however, that Secretary Seward declines to interfere.

The Board of Aldermen met at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon and held a very brief session. A resolution by Mr. Boole, authorizing the Committee on National Affairs to obtain designs for a monument to be erected in the soldiers' burial-plot in Calvary Cemetery, and report the one most suitable for the purpose, was referred. The resolution to give the Sixty-ninth Regiment, N. Y. S. M., $10,000, came up for action on the amendment inserted by the Councilmen—that the money be paid to the treasurer of the regimental fund, on proving to the Comptroller that Col. Murphy's regiment are entitled to it—and was referred to the Committee on National Affairs, after a brief discussion. Mr. Willis claimed that the action of the State military authorities in recognizing Col. Murphy's corps as the "Simon Pure" Sixty-ninth Regiment substantiated their right to receive the douceur. Mr. Mitchell held that Major Bagley's command, now in the City, was the "original Jacobs," and having organized a regiment and sent it to the war with their own militia numerical designation, were the proper parties to receive the money. Mr. Frowert took a middle course and would rule both organizations out, unless the State acknowledged the Sixty-ninth to be at the seat of war, because the money was pledged only to the militia regiments that should reorganize and recruit in the national army. Adjourned till 1 o'clock P. M. to-day.

The Board of Councilmen met at 4 o'clock P. M. yesterday. A remonstrance from the ash and dirt cartmen, against the sub-contracting system practiced by the street-cleaning contractor, was presented by Mr. Webster. It was referred. In reference to the street-cleaners' troubles in the Seventeenth Ward, the City Inspector communicated that no notice of unpaid claims of workmen had been filed with him, and that in pursuance of one of the conditions of the contract with Hackley, he will withhold the last semi-monthly payment for the year, terminating in February next, till all unsettled claims for labor or materials under the contract are satisfied. The majority and minority reports of the Railway Committee, concerning the Sixth-avenue Railroad, were made the special order for next Monday evening. The Board adjourned to Monday.

The Board of Supervisors held a short session at 3 o'clock P. M. yesterday. The Mayor sent in twenty-one names for confirmation as Marshals—a new class of officers authorized by the last Legislature to take the place of constables in the county—and they were unanimously rejected, nem. con. The law says that thirty of these officers must be appointed, but the Mayor set forth that he had only made up his mind favorably upon the number stated above, leaving the Board to infer that he would nominate nine more so soon as he could determine who to select for the position. The Board adjourned until 3 o'clock P. M. of next Tuesday.

The bark Kate Stanler, Capt. Fitz, arrived at this port last night, from Pensacola, bringing two hundred and eighty bales of cotton, the cargo of the schr. Jefferson Davis, captured from the rebels by the United States bark Wm. Henderson. The cotton is in charge of Acting Master S. Wainwright, who comes passenger by the Kate. She has also on board one hundred and forty casks of returned whisky, 7,000 thirty-two pounder shot, and one large rifled gun.

It was rumored in Nashville, on Dec. 20, that the rebel Gen. Geo. B. Crittenden died in Knoxville on the day preceding.

There are indications that some of the oil wells in Canada have "touched bottom." The famous Shaw well, which used to yield from 800 to 1,000 barrels daily, has stopped flowing almost entirely.

The tobacco crop in the vicinity of Hannibal, Mo., is very abundant the present season.

Motion was yesterday made, at Chambers of the Supreme Court, before Justice Barnard, to set aside, for irregularity, the inquests recently taken in the cases brought against Fernando Wood, to recover for injuries alleged to have been received by the plaintiffs, (municipal policemen,) in the riots of 1857, growing out of the conflict of the two Boards of Police—one of which was under the authority of Mr. Wood, then Mayor. Certain objections were made by Mr. Field, who appeared for the plaintiffs, one of which was that Justice Barnard had formerly acted in some way as counsel for Mr. Wood. To determine in respect to such preliminary objections, the Court postponed the matter until Tuesday next, and set it down for that day.

The Stock Market was tame through yesterday's business. Prices generally steady. Gold weak at 131¼@132 per cent. Exchange 145¼@146 per cent. Money easy at 6 per cent.

A fair business was transacted yesterday in Breadstuffs and Cotton, which advanced slightly, as also in Hay, Hops, Cloverseed, Tallow, Beef, Lard and Bacon, which were steady. Pork, Whisky, Wool and Tobacco were in moderate request. Groceries, Hemp, Fish, Fruit, Oils, Skins, Metals and Naval Stores were in limited demand. The freight market was quiet.

Military Calculations—Gens. Siegel and McDowell Again.—It is received as an established rule in military affairs that an officer must obey orders. It would seem to be a natural inference that he should read them. As a general thing, we presume they do; but the proceedings of the Courts-martial now sitting at Washington disclose the fact that this is not always the case.

Among the witnesses examined in the McDowell Court of Inquiry is Gen. Sigel, who was put under McDowell's command by Gen. Pope, during the celebrated retreat from the Rapidan—for reasons which have not yet been stated, but which may possibly be disclosed before the trial is over. Gen. Sigel acknowledged that he was prejudiced against Gen. McDowell, partly on account of an impolite remark which the latter was reported to have made to a Staff officer, partly because he did not understand why Gen. McDowell did not go to Gen. McClellan's aid at Richmond, and partly because he took no steps to prevent the rebels from passing through Thoroughfare Gap. In regard to the latter point Gen. Sigel testified that Gen. McDowell visited his headquarters on the 27th of August, near Buckland Mills, and discussed the question what force should be left at Thoroughfare Gap. But Gen. Sigel went to sleep on the sofa while Gen. McDowell was examining the map,—asking the latter to "notify him as soon as he should come to an understanding with himself." But Gen. McDowell, he adds, did not tell him his decision on the point, nor did he know anything about the troops to which were assigned the defence of the Gap. Gen. McDowell "did not make any definite proposition on that subject."

The next piece of evidence introduced was a General Order issued by McDowell the next morning, directing Gen. Sigel to "march immediately with his whole corps on Manassas Junction, with his right resting on the Manassas Railroad," and designing to three other divisions their places in the same movement,—which as Gen. Sigel acknowledged did make provision for the defence of the Gap. But Gen. Sigel, admitting that he received the order, says he could not have read the whole of it, and that he "must have regarded it as pretty indefinite, all things taken into consideration."

We think it would be well to have it understood distinctly by officers of all grades that orders are to be read through, and also that Generals should not permit themselves to charge each other with neglect of duty, in the face of documents so explicit as this one, without first becoming aware of their contents. Gen. Sigel has suffered the statement that he attempted to shoot Gen. McDowell, having detected him in attempted treachery on the field, to circulate for months through the country, knowing it to be utterly false, without the slightest attempt to contradict or check it. This extraordinary course finds an explanation, though not a justification by any means, in his acknowledgment of a strong prejudice against Gen. McDowell. But he must give some better reason for that prejudice than he has yet assigned, if he seeks to satisfy the public of the justice or propriety of his course of action. It is natural that Gen. Sigel should resent being placed under McDowell's orders on the field of battle; but he might indicate that resentment in some way more consistent with honor and self-respect, than that which he seems to have adopted.

The aspect of military affairs at the close of the year is not very brilliant, at least on the surface. In its last month, we have suffered our severest repulse, and the old Army of the Potomac is, as at this season last year, checked in the advance upon Richmond by a powerful foe in front. Our army operating in the rear of Richmond, too, under Gen. Foster, has just made a retrograde movement, which it would be folly to represent as anything but a very serious setback—a setback, too, which is likely to make future operations on the same line much more difficult and hazardous than they were before. Along the line of the sea-coast and the Gulf all that can be said is, that nothing now is less cheerful than things were in the Spring. We have gained but little there during the Summer and Fall, and the small operations that have taken place, though they may have annoyed the rebels, have resulted in very little permanent gain to the Union cause. In the Western field, where nearly half our entire army is scattered, the prospect for the opening year is not very cheerful. The army of Gen. Rosecrans seems to be utterly paralyzed at Nashville, and its advance into East Tennessee is now checked by the largest army which the rebels have ever had in that State. The army of Gen. Grant, in Northern Mississippi, is virtually cut off from its base of supplies, and the rebels, as appears from the accounts we now daily publish, are operating with audacity on every side of him. The Mississippi River is still closed against us, and though it is to be hoped that the military and naval expedition now preparing to open it up will be successful, yet it is liable to all the chances and hazards of war.

This glance at the aspect of affairs in the East and West shows a very different state of things from what we had all expected to see at the close of the year. It gives force and point to the remark of that experienced soldier and sagacious military speculator Napier, that "it may at all times be taken as a maxim, that the difficulties of war are so innumerable that no head was ever yet strong enough to forecalculate them all."

And yet even in face of the apparently discouraging facts we have narrated, what grounds of encouragement appear! If Rosecrans has not yet advanced to Knoxville, he holds firmly with his splendid army the Capital of the great rebel State of Tennessee, the capture of which at this time last year seemed to many of us a hopeless task. If the army of Grant has not yet swept down to the Gulf, he is very near the capital of a State bordering on the Gulf. If the Mississippi is not yet unlocked, the key to open it is at least forged; and if it be not opened by New Year's day, we feel sure enough, though we would not err against Napier's apophthegm by forecalculating success, that the free navigation of the great river will be the first gift of the New Year to the nation. The work in the Southwest is yet very considerable, but it is not one-quarter of what it was at this time last year. The same may be said of the entire Southern coast line. Mark on a map how we stood there at the close of last year, and how we stand there now, and see the abounding encouragements from Norfolk to Galveston.

There is nothing to dishearten us in Virginia. Our army is not in Richmond, but a single battle may put it there. The Scottish Chieftain had fought many unsuccessful battles for the independence of his native land, when he was taught by the spider that success lay in perseverance; and his perseverance resulted in success. The score of great battles we have fought for the possession of the rebel capital, have had their share of victories, and in every one of them, except the first, there has been a steady progress toward success. Could we pierce the veil of the future, we might see that while some are discouraged, they were discouraged just as glorious and final victory was about to burst upon the country.

Our great hope is in the vitality that appears so cheeringly in our main army. Notwithstanding the tremendous work, the unparalleled campaignings, the heroic struggles, which the veteran Army of the Potomac has gone through during the last six months, all accounts represent it as now possessed of greater elements of vitality, more unflinching courage, more determined and warlike spirit, than at any period since its organization. There is no discouragement there. The gallant men who, on our behalf, have so often met and fought the foes of the Union, feel no doubt of their power to overcome them. They demand now, what they have ever demanded, to be led against them again and again confident that they will succumb at last. Under such circumstances, the only discouragement is that any man in peaceful life should be at all discouraged.

The Attorney-General on Citizenship.

We have already given by telegraph an abstract of the opinion of Attorney-General Bates on the question submitted by the Treasury Department, whether colored men may be citizens, and thus competent to command American vessels. That opinion, very long and elaborate, is now published in full. The subject is analyzed with great accuracy and thoroughness, and the conclusion that color is not a bar to citizenship, under the Constitution, seems to be irresistibly established. The Attorney-General elucidates with great success that citizenship does not necessarily involve a legal capacity to hold office or cast votes; that it simply means such a membership of the body politic that there is a reciprocal obligation of allegiance on the one side and protection on the other. The Constitution, in using the term "natural born citizen," uses no affirmative language to make them such, but only recognizes and reaffirms the universal principle common to all nations, that the people born in the country constitute the nation, and that every individual of them is prima facie a citizen. The Constitution, in not excluding the free man of color from the pale of citizenship, must by implication, the Attorney-General holds, comprise him, and entitle him to protection, in return for allegiance. While yet, without positive statute law in his favor, he can no more vote or be eligible to office than women and children, who, in the view of constitutional law, are also citizens, if born in the country.

So far as regards the mere decision that a free colored man may be a citizen of the United States, it is of little practical account either to black men or anybody else—for the advantages it gives them are very few, and such as one in ten thousand of them will never think of using. It enables them to command American vessels, to sue in the National courts, to receive passports when traveling abroad—and that is pretty much all. The colored man's right of voting, of holding office, and all the higher civil privileges, must still, as ever, be determined exclusively by State regulations.

Yet we confess we feel a certain satisfaction in seeing the last blow dealt at that worst of judicial enormities—the Dred Scott decision. The majority of the Court in that case, in a most remarkable manner, traveled out of their way to set up and consolidate the extremest pretensions of Mr. Calhoun for the future acceptance and direction of the country. They brought out their conclusions almost entirely from extra-judicial material—ignoring many most important cases decided by their predecessors, bearing directly upon this or that point. They seemed precisely as if they had absolutely thrown away all their old authorities and adopted the complete edition of Mr. Calhoun's works as their vade mecum—their pocket manual—their constitutional law-made-easy in twenty-four lessons. Not content with sustaining the plea in abatement on the face of the record, which was in itself decisive, they must needs improve the occasion by undertaking to settle other matters. They, therefore, volunteered labored opinions, first, that the Missouri Compromise was unconstitutional; second, that all Territories were open to Slavery; and third, that none but white men could ever be citizens. It is true, that not every member of the majority committed himself distinctly to these positions, but the Chief Justice did, and his dicta were suffered to go forth as the solemn adjudication of the Court. How vain this effort! This demonstration against the Missouri Compromise was designed to give Kansas to Slavery, and yet within a year that State was admitted into the Union with a constitution forever interdicting Slavery. The edict—for it amounted to nothing less than that—that all the Territories should be open to Slavery, finds its answer in the late act of Congress, precluding Slavery from every foot of territorial soil. And the dictum that no man with a drop of African blood in his veins should enjoy the protection that belongs to American citizenship, coupled as it was with the memorable libel upon our fathers, that it was their doctrine that "black men had no rights which white men are bound to respect," now gets its quietus in the conclusive exposition of the Attorney-General, that the National Constitution makes no distinction on the subject.

It was the height of folly for the Supreme Court majority to undertake to settle political questions in this way. All American history has proved that Judge-made law, in questions of political bearing, never obtains the force of settled authority. Even when such questions have come legitimately before the Court, and a decision upon it was a matter of necessity, as in the matter of the constitutionality of the United States Bank, the judicial decision has seldom proved final, except for the individual case in hand. Congress and political parties have usually continued to debate them with just as much freedom as before. If this has been the result of decisions legitimately rendered by the Court even in its palmy days, when Chief-Justice Marshall presided, what folly was it for Chief-Justice Taney and his associates to imagine that they could settle political questions by dragging them into Court without any real occasion whatever. It was in all respects an irrational and most unfortunate attempt;—unfortunate for the reputation and authority of the Court, unfortunate for the harmonious relation of the Free and Slave States, and unfortunate for the position of the country before the civilized world. The experiment will stand in the jurisprudence of the Republic only as a lasting warning.

Detected Frauds.

An agent of the War Department, Mr. O. S. Ozorr, has been secretly but busily engaged in this City, since the 1st of November, in the investigation of alleged frauds upon the Government in the enlistment, organization and subsistence of Volunteers. During the progress of these investigations, it was thought advisable to arrest certain individuals who were brokers in claims against the Government, and whose complicity in the frauds seemed too surely established. A cry of indignation arose from certain quarters when these arrests were announced. The Administration was execrated by all the organs of disloyalty for its tyranny in seizing men without charges preferred, and holding them in custody without trial.

But yet, from the very nature of the offences committed, and the necessity of secrecy in the investigations progressing, it was impossible to give to the public the reasons for the arrests. The frauds were found to be vast, of long continuance, and deeply ramified through the community, involving hundreds of persons, officers, agents and employes of the City, State and National Governments. If the reasons of one arrest were given, it would alarm the whole gang of confederate plunderers, and defeat the ends of justice. Yesterday, Mr. Ozorr had got his investigations in such a state of completeness, that he felt justified in furnishing to the City Press an outline of their results, for which we refer the reader to other columns in to-day's Times.

It is truly a sickening development that is made. It appears that not less than one thousand persons are implicated in an organized system of fraud that has been for more than one year in operation in this City. The total amount out of which the Government is already known to have been swindled is not less than $700,000. It will in the end, no doubt, be found to exceed even this sum. The particular modes of swindling pursued are set forth with sufficient clearness and minuteness in the columns devoted to the subject. When the matter is fully seen, it will be wondered that so moderate a limit to the losses has been fixed.

It is to be hoped that the agent of the War Department has made sure of his facts and of the offenders, so that retributive justice may not be balked of its dues. The crime of which the parties are guilty is sufficient in a civil tribunal to send each one to the State's Prison. But the discipline of military law should furnish a prompter and severer punishment. It is too bad to think that while the great masses of the people have with patriotic and generous ardor opened their hearts and their purses freely to the Government, and offered everything on the altar of their country, there have been men so heartless and dishonest as to make this burst of patriotic passion the occasion of a perfect carnival of thieving and villainy. And it must always stand to the credit of the Administration, that amid the oppressive and harassing cares of office, it has been so ready and so energetic in the investigation of frauds of its pretended friends. Let it quickly and adequately punish, and its vindication will be complete.

Our Foreign Commerce and the War.

The report of the British Board of Trade for the ten months ending Oct. 31, has just been completed, and shows the fallacious character of the predictions so confidently made on both sides of the Atlantic that our war-tariff would annihilate the trade between this country and England. This fiscal measure, according to the leading London journal, was destined to render the commerce of the United Kingdom with the "Northern Americans" of less consequence than that with the cannibal islanders of the Southern Ocean. At present, so far as Great Britain is concerned, it is only too evident that the changes we have found necessary in our customs duties have given her no just ground of complaint. The British trade with our Northern ports has not fallen off. On the contrary, it has in several important points received considerable increase. Indeed, English commerce seems, on the whole, to have been a gainer, rather than a loser, from the war. For if in one direction her cotton manufactures have suffered, her shipping and general maritime interests have reaped a compensating advantage in another.

Of the thriving condition of our international traffic we find evidence in the fact that the merchandise shipped to the North from England amounted, during the three first quarters of 1861, to £7,002,841. This year the amount is £10,468,279. These figures show that we have expended in the purchase of British goods over seventeen millions of dollars more than under the lower tariff of 1861.

Moreover, a natural result of this and other well known causes has been that England has received from us a large amount of specie. During the first ten months of the year 1861 England received from the United States £50,066. This year the amount is no less than £8,112,806, nearly all of which was in gold. The specie exports to this country were only £36,754, against £7,274,454 in 1861. This state of things during the protracted drain of bullion from England to the East and to France cannot fail to have rendered opportune aid to important interests, while it has caused in this country a pressure which might have proved embarrassing and serious if gold were not one of our largest domestic products.

Turning to the other side of this international balance-sheet, we find that England received from our Northern ports produce amounting in 1861 to £16,845,607, while this year the amount was £17,482,465, giving an increase of more than five millions of dollars.

While Great Britain has thus been extending her commerce with the North, the trade with the Southern ports has, of course, been almost annihilated by the blockade. Thus, the value of the goods shipped from British ports directly to the South have fallen from £736,494 in 1861 to £41,891 in 1862. What amount of indirect trade may have been carried on through neutral ports and by running the blockade, we cannot, of course, ascertain. The imports to England from the South have diminished from £26,005,216 in 1861, to £678,194 in 1862.

As to the extent of the injury inflicted by the war on our merchant vessels, we think it has been, to some extent, exaggerated. Still there is no inconsiderable amount of depletion. For we find that the vessels which entered English ports from this country, formed, in the first ten months of 1861, an aggregate of 1,784,800 tons, and in the same period of 1862, an aggregate of 1,217,716 tons. The shipping which left England for American ports, amounted, in 1861, to 1,182,276 tons against 1,044,337 tons in 1862. The nationality of these vessels is not distinguished. But that a smaller proportion than usual sailed under the American flag is very evident from the fact, elsewhere stated in the report, that the amount of our shipping which entered British ports from all parts of the world, was in 1861, 1,454,444 tons, and, in 1862, no more than 996,220 tons. The amount of our shipping which sailed from English ports, in 1861, was 1,207,088 tons, and, in 1862, it had fallen off to 877,080 tons.

This temporary injury to our shipping has attracted considerable attention. Although the mischief has in part been caused by interested rumors, artfully circulated by means of hostile newspapers, a similar evil is perhaps inevitable in a war carried on by a nation possessing few ocean war-steamers, in proportion to the number of its merchant vessels. While, however, we are sure that on the return of peace the enterprise and prominent superiority of our mariners and merchants will soon more than recover all that has been lost, we cannot but regard it as a National misfortune that the energy of our Navy Department has not been equal to the task of preventing military half-armed privateers, like the Sumter or the Alabama, from driving our ships from the ocean, and inflicting an unavenged and vital injury on the commerce of one of the most powerful maritime countries in the world.

Gen. McClellan's Reports.—The Evening Post calls upon the War Department to publish the reports of Gen. McClellan, containing the details of his campaign on the Peninsula. We have repeatedly done the same thing. But the War Department will find it very difficult to comply with this demand, reasonable as it would otherwise be, because there are no such reports in existence. The Albany Atlas & Argus, we are aware, some months ago asserted, in the most explicit terms, that Gen. McClellan had made full and detailed reports of the movements of his army, and of the several battles in which they had been engaged;—and it further charged that these reports had been suppressed by the War Department for the purpose of injuring Gen. McClellan, and depriving him of the credit which was his due.

In spite of these very distinct and positive averments, we see no reason to believe them true. In reply to a recent application from one of the Courts-martial at Washington, the Adjutant-General stated that no reports from Gen. McClellan were to be found in the Departments, except the preliminary reports received by telegraph, and which have already been given to the public. This, it seems to us, sets the whole question at rest. Indeed, we have seen it stated, on what ought to be good authority, that Gen. McClellan has employed himself mainly, since he was relieved from the command of the Army of the Potomac, in preparing full reports of his campaigns. If this is so, we may expect in due time to see them published.

French Intervention.—Some of our neighbors are working themselves into what seems to us a needless panic, over the anticipated declarations and movements of the Emperor Napoleon. They remember that on New-Year's Day, 1862, at the diplomatic reception, he gave the Austrian Minister an intimation of the impending war. They are quite certain, therefore, that on next New-Year's he will give Mr. Dayton to understand that he intends to intervene in our affairs.

The Emperor is entitled, in our judgment, to credit for more originality than this apprehension ascribes to him. He is not likely thus to repeat himself. His remark to the Austrian Minister was a happy hit, because it was an unusual way of announcing his purpose to the world. But it would not be as good a second time, and for that very reason it is not likely to be employed.

We do not believe that the Emperor intends any intervention in our affairs—none certainly in the least inconsistent with the most cordial relations of friendship. He may possibly volunteer some advice, which we trust will be received with all the deference it may deserve. But beyond this he will not go. And for even this, if he decides upon it, he will seek some other mode and occasion than that furnished by the diplomatic reception on New-Year's day.

Amusements.

German Opera.—Mozart's opera of "Le Nozze de Figaro" will be played here to-night.

Theatre Francais.—Three pieces will be given to-night by the members of Mr. Jourdan's company—"La Mère de Famille," "Un Tuteur Logue," and "Un Homme du Sud."

Brooklyn Academy of Music.—This evening Mr. Edwin Booth brings to a close his brief, but brilliant, engagement at Brooklyn, appearing in two of his best roles—Shylock and Don Cæsar de Bazan—in which his admirers consider him beyond rivalry. The occasion will doubtless draw the best house he has yet had.

Devoted to the communications of the
IRREPRESSIBLE ORPHEUS C. KERR,
And that keen political satirist,
DISBANDED VOLUNTEER.
Their respective letters in the issue of
TO-MORROW,
Will abound in
PALPABLE HITS
AT
BLUNDERS IN HIGH PLACES,
And all who desire to exercise their
RISIBLE MUSCLES,
Will find in the W. Humor and Sarcasm,
Of these two
ORIGINAL JOKERS,
Ample material for fun.
THE SUNDAY MERCURY
Includes in its plan every desirable feature of a GREAT PUBLIC JOURNAL,
And has more than THREE TIMES the circulation of all the other Sunday papers.
PRICE FIVE CENTS PER COPY.

THE DEMAND for
PIERCE EGAN'S
Enchanting Story,
THE POOR GIRL, OR THE MARCHIONESS AND HER SECRET, commenced in the
SUNDAY MERCURY
of
SUNDAY LAST, Dec. 21, continues unabated. Although it has
SWEPT OFF TWO IMMENSE EDITIONS,
THEREFORE, to accommodate the public, there will be published in the columns of the
of
TO-MORROW,
a full synopsis of the chapters which appeared in the issue of Dec. 21, as well as ANOTHER INSTALLMENT
of this wonderful romance of the passions. Thus all who failed to obtain a copy of the GREAT SUNDAY NEWSPAPER, this week will be enabled to begin the story in the issue of to-morrow. The abstract of the missing chapters has been carefully prepared, and includes every incident essential to a clear apprehension of the entire narrative. The touching scene with which the third chapter closes is succeeded in that which will be given in continuation to-morrow by other startling developments, and the interest of this most remarkable of modern stories deepens as it proceeds, compelling the admiration and sympathy of the coldest reader. The adventures and sorrows of the "Poor Girl," the plots and machinations of which she is the victim, and the portraiture of every phase of social life from the highest to the lowest, which are afforded in the history of her career, evince in the author a reality of invention and a power of description unequalled by any novelist of the present day. He portrays the mystical life of the regular Order of the Organ, with extraordinary effect. Pride and Love, Revenge and Hatred, Fidelity stronger than the fear of death, and Cupidity on the one side for any villainy that will pay, are personified by his creative pen. He touches the deep-seated springs of feeling, he relieves the mind wearied with the matured, original plot, and it is difficult to believe that he has not actually participated in the scenes he so strikingly depicts. The whole romance may be compared to a vivid dream, in which everything seems so real, that it is difficult on waking, to believe it an illusion. Even those who have read "Pimpernel, or the Marble Heart," "Love Me, Love My Dog," "The Flower of the Flock," and "The Scarlet Flower," by the same writer, will hardly be prepared for the genius and skill displayed in this highly-wrought and soul-stirring story.
THE POOR GIRL, OR THE SECRET OF THE MARCHIONESS, is printed from
PROOF-SHEETS,
furnished in advance by the author, and will be continued weekly in the SUNDAY MERCURY until concluded. It is the COSTLIEST STORY
that has ever appeared in the paper, but also the best; and it is by securing the highest talent, without reference to expense, that the proprietors of the SUNDAY MERCURY have obtained for it a regular circulation that MORE THAN TRIPLES the combined issues of all its Sunday cotemporaries. It is conducted on the principle that well-directed enterprise, backed by capital, cannot fail, in this country, to command success. This was the theory of its conductors from the beginning, and they have now the most SUBSTANTIAL REASON to know that it is PRACTICALLY TRUE.
Price of the SUNDAY MERCURY, the largest and most comprehensive newspaper published in America, FIVE CENTS PER COPY. For sale by all news-men and news-boys.

RELIGIOUS NOTICES.

WHO DID IT?
We are permitted to publish the following important letter, received by our friend, D. S. Barnes, Esq.:
JERUSALEM, Sept. 10, 1862.
DEAR FRIEND—* * * * You will not find Macadamized roads in the Holy Land, but the same irregular wandering mule paths stretch over the mountain steps that were traveled by patriarchs and apostles of old. We started early to ascend Mount Olivet, to behold the sun gild the minarets and towers of the devoted city, from the place where memory, stirred by a thousand associations, should enable the mind as well as the eye to the inspiration and beauty of the scene. Well is the voyager repaid for long travels, horrid roads, antediluvian cookery, squalid companionship, and the importunities of leaping, thieving Arabs. Well would it have repaid you, O, thou man of commerce and the counting, and well might you have been reminded of your own city of New-York, for here, painted upon a board nailed against one of the huge ancient olive trees under which the sacred martyrs toiled for the sins of a world eighteen hundred years ago, were these familiar figures—"S. T. 1863. X." Although inclined to seriousness, none could suppress a smile when Smith said, "No danger: civilized, certain. Drake has been here with his Plantation Bitters." * * * * *
L. A. R.
We do not know who did it—but no doubt some invalid traveler, cured by the Plantation Bitters, wished to advertise their virtues in a place from whence all knowledge flows.
It is well conceded that no article was ever so effacious, speedy and certain a cure for general debility as the Plantation Bitters.
They purify, strengthen and invigorate.
They create a healthy appetite.
They are an antidote to change of water and diet.
They overcome effects of dissipation and late hours.
They strengthen the system and enlive the mind.
They prevent miasmatic and intermittent fevers.
They purify the breath and acidity of the stomach.
They cure Dyspepsia and Constipation.
They cure Diarrhea, Cholera and Cholera Morbus.
They cure Liver Complaint and Nervous Headache.
They are the best Bitters in the world. They make the weak man strong, and are exhausted nature's great restorer. They are made of pure St. Croix Rum, the celebrated Calisaya Bark, Wintergreen, Snake-root, Anise, Dandelion, Burdock, Chamomile Flowers, etc., etc.
Dr. W. A. Childs, Surgeon of the Tenth Vermont Regiment, writes: "I wish every soldier had a bottle of Plantation Bitters. They are the most effective, perfect and harmless tonic I ever used."
The following is from the famous hotel proprietors at Washington:
WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 4, 1862.
Messrs. P. H. DRAKE & Co.—Please send us twelve dozen Plantation Bitters. They are much liked by the guests of our house.
Respectfully yours,
SYKES, CHADWICK & CO.,
Proprietors Willard's Hotel.
"The Plantation Bitters have cured me of a long-standing and terrible Dyspepsia."
Rev. J. S. CATHORN, Rochester, N. Y.
Such is the language reaching us daily. No article ever had an equal sale. Under no circumstances will the pure standard of the materials used be departed from.
These Bitters are sold by all the principal druggists, grocers, hotels and restaurants. Be sure each bottle bears the fac-simile of the proprietor's signature, on a steel plate label. P. H. DRAKE & CO.,

MRS. FREMONT'S NEW BOOK,
THE STORY OF THE GUARD,
A CHRONICLE OF THE WAR.
BY MRS. JESSIE BENTON FREMONT.
1 vol. 12mo. Elegantly bound in beveled boards.
Price $1 25.
This book, from the pen of the wife of Gen. Fremont, is a true story of the celebrated body-guard, whose achievements have been made the subject of such diverse criticism. Mrs. Fremont has undertaken the story from a desire to do simple justice to "these truly soldierly young men, worthy of a place in the chronicles of knightly deeds, who were misrepresented, slighted, and finally insulted by the very persons of the army they had been hard at work to contribute everything to the relief of the families of such of the Guard as had lost their lives in the service. To this latter account the profits of the work will be devoted.
The "Story of the Guard" is not a production of mere chronicle, though it is perfectly strictly in facts, it abounds in romantic and thrilling incidents. It is, as the author says of it, "the livelier story of the Guard; interesting from the facts—interesting because in ten thousand homes some vacant place will lend a stronger interest to the tale."

THE BATTLE AT FAYETTEVILLE, ARK.

[Correspondence of the Chicago Journal.]

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE FRONTIER, RAY'S MILLS, ARK., Sunday, Dec. 7, 1862.

Death has reaped a terrible harvest to-day. The [illegible] of Prairie Grove will long be remembered by the people of the West, and it will fill a conspicuous place in the future history of this cruel and unholy war.

Since the battle of "Bone Hill," the forces of Gen. Blunt have been occupying a radius of country [illegible] miles, comprising Dutch Town Mills, Boonsboro, or Kane Hill and Ray's Mills, the great [illegible] of Arkansas. Gen. SALOMON'S brigade occupied Ray's Mills; the other two brigades [illegible] Boonsboro.

On the morning of the 5th Gen. BLUNT learned that the enemy were making preparations to cross Boston Mountain, and attack us at Boonsboro. During the day the enemy advanced in force, driving our cavalry [illegible] Both armies then commenced [illegible] their pickets. During the night severe skirmishing was going on in the mountains, our pickets slowly retiring toward Boonsboro, and the enemy approaching within two miles of our main lines. During Saturday, the 6th, the enemy continued to hold his position at the foot and upon the north side of Boston Mountain, upon the same ground where we had fought and whipped them on the 28th ult.

We had learned positively that HINDMAN had reinforced MARMADUKE with about twenty thousand men, and fourteen pieces of artillery. This was evidence conclusive that the enemy was planning to overwhelm our small force, knowing that they would have nothing but the division of BLUNT to oppose them. But Gen. BLUNT, upon the first intimation of HINDMAN's reinforcement, ordered the command of Gen. [illegible] forward upon forced marches. At ten o'clock on the morning of the 7th (Sunday) we discovered that HINDMAN had escaped to trap us. His demonstration upon our front was only to cover his flank movement upon our left with his entire army of [illegible] men. Before we had discovered his intention, his whole force was far on its way towards Ray's Mills, where he intended to fall in our rear and cut us up. Let us see how he succeeded.

Immediately our two brigades were "about faced" and moved on Ray's Mills on a double-quick, on a diagonal line to intercept our trains, taking a road parallel and a little west of us. Now commenced the strife. HINDMAN had fully four miles the start with the front of his column, his men enthusiastic with the prospect of getting our rear and cutting off our trains of over 200 wagons and a fresh supply of commissary stores. The army was upon what is called the "Wire road," leading from Fayetteville to Van Buren; while Gen. BLUNT's column was upon a parallel road, and moving in reverse march to reinforce the army at Ray's Mills, or Boonsboro. About three miles, a mile south of east of Ray's Mills, Gen. HERRON and HINDMAN met together, similar to two locomotives, both [illegible] thunder-struck at this unexpected meeting. Now the fun commenced. The men were speedily formed, the guns unlimbered, and the "war dogs" of battle. BLUNT's Division heard the first roar of the cannon, and were west upon the dead about three miles. The becoming of every gun added to old strength and speed to men and beast. Leaving the main road, we took a straight shoot over fences, ditches, through fields of chaparral and short brush, until we came to the enemy's left, some two hundred yards in rear of their main line, making a movement to flank HINDMAN with a force of over 3,000 infantry. HINDMAN forces fought like tigers, and the enemy were overwhelming them with numbers, and they already began to falter. Instantly our (BLUNT's) guns were unlimbered, and two full batteries belched forth shell and shot into the enemy's left. This was sweet music to the ears of Gen. HERRON and his brave boys. The roar of our first guns had hardly died away, when a thrilling cheer went up from HINDMAN's whole division that informed for a moment that all hope of battle. Cheer upon cheer was sent up from their ranks, as our becoming cannon told them we had come to the rescue! Our lines were speedily formed, and in less than half an hour the whole line, from HERRON's left to BLUNT's right, was engaged. It was now about 2 o'clock, and one of the most lovely days that ever cheered us on a Western climate.

The enemy fought with desperation. They were covered through the entire length of their lines with a small growth of timber and upon the height of land; while our entire forces were upon the open, level ground fronting the timber. This gave them a very great advantage. Again and again our infantry would charge into the woods from the open fields and driven back; and then by would they go, never yet upon open and drive them again to the edge of the opening. Thus the battle wavered until darkness began to set in, when our troops were ordered to withdraw from the woods to the open fields, in good order. The rebels were all set for this movement. The enemy supposed we retreating, as our cannon were still, and they came charging to the very open fields, with fiercest cheers. The whole skirt of the woods was filled with rebels. Our fifty cannon poured a volley of grape and canister into their lines that struck them down. Our guns were sixty yards in front of our infantry and stampeded to avoid the fire of our battery, many of them almost reaching the mouths of the cannon; but another volley of canister sent them howling to the wilderness, and closed their ears. A few rounds more of shell into the dust and the battle was ended. Darkness was upon us. A few hearty cheers went up for the stars and stripes, and all was quiet but the groans of the wounded and dying. The foot was ours. A little victory had been won, and Herrion had been outgeneraled.

I cannot give you the thousand incidents of personal bravery that occurred through the day. It is sufficient to say that all our troops did nobly. None but those fighting under our glorious flag could have fought so bravely.

Flags of truce were sent from both lines to pick up the wounded. The whole night was occupied in this work. The wounded were scattered through the brush and woods, and the darkness made the work slow and tedious.

Our loss will reach over one thousand men; that of the enemy will easily double ours. HINDMAN has fled with his great army over the mountains again, and will not, probably, make a stand until he reaches the Arkansas River.

Gens. BLUNT and HERRON had an interview the next morning after the battle, at the solicitation of the latter. The subject matter of the interview was unimportant, further than an arrangement for the exchange of prisoners, and the acknowledgment of HINDMAN that he was whipped severely. The prisoners taken say that our artillery slaughtered them terribly. Nearly all express a wish to see the war ended, and the wounded seem to rejoice that their wounds will let them out of the rebel service.

THE BEST SOAP IN USE
E. MORGAN'S SONS'

MOTTLED SOAP.

This Soap is, without doubt, the best and cheapest in use. It is manufactured from the best materials; and being entirely free from any of those injurious substances so often found in soap, we do not hesitate to pronounce it unequaled for washing flannels and fine goods, or for family use of any kind. We have several other qualities of soaps which give the most unqualified satisfaction wherever used. Our house has been established upward of fifty years, and has a wide reputation for manufacturing only from the best materials.

STUPENDOUS FRAUDS ON THE GOVERNMENT.

Upwards of $700,000 Swindled Out of the Government in this City.

How Regiments were Raised and Subsisted—Operations of Contract Brokers—False Affidavits and Forgeries Without Number.

THE WHOLE MODUS OPERANDI.

It is generally known to the public that Commissioners, appointed by the General Government, have been at work, for several weeks past, in this City and elsewhere, investigating alleged frauds upon the Government in connection with the raising and subsisting of volunteers, organizing of regiments, and other operations, from the commencement of the rebellion to the present time. The Press has thus far been requested to withhold information developed during the progress of the investigation, for the reason that the Government desired, before making it public, to perfect the chain of evidence against the parties already implicated, and to prevent a general skedaddle among those whose guilt might be discovered as the investigation progressed. The Commissioner appointed for this City was Mr. H. S. Olcott, who has now arrived at that point in his investigations where the general facts connected with the frauds, and the manner in which they were perpetrated, may be made public without interfering with the ends of the Government and the ends of justice.

Mr. Olcott entered upon his investigations on the 1st of November last, and has already discovered frauds to the extent of $700,000 perpetrated in this City, and the prospect is that they will reach double that amount before the investigation is finished. In order to give a clear idea of the mode, or rather the various modes, in which the Government has been swindled, it is necessary to go back to the beginning of the war. When the rebellion broke out Congress was not in session, and there was no appropriation by the General Government to defray the expenses of recruiting regiments of volunteers; consequently the expense connected with raising regiments had to be paid either by the Colonels and regimental officers, by subscriptions of private individuals, or by donations from the Union Defence Committee. In the following August, however, during the extra session of Congress, $20,000,000 were appropriated to recruit and organize volunteers, and the Adjutant-General of the United States Army was made the custodian of the fund. Mustering officers were established in the different cities, and at each office an army officer was appointed to disburse the moneys that were drawn from the general fund. The disbursing officer appointed for this City was Col. Sackett, of the regular army. He hired a building in White-street, opened his disbursing office, appointed his clerks, and was immediately overwhelmed with business. The first sum received from the Adjutant-General was $50,000, which was all disbursed in three or four days.

As soon as it became known that a Government disbursing office had been opened here, the hunters of claims against Uncle Sam swarmed around its doors like the locusts of Egypt, and continued to increase in numbers until Col. Sackett got a second instalment from the Adjutant-General, which was not until three or four weeks after the first instalment. The second draft was for $100,000, which was soon disbursed, and was the last received until the following November, when another instalment of about the same amount was sent on from Washington. The disbursements made at this time were principally for the subsistence and lodging of recruits after their enlistment, and pending the time of their going into camp; and it may be stated here that the regulations of the United States Army had always been that bills for subsistence and lodging should be certified to by the recruiting officer, signed by the contractor, and referred as approved by the Colonel commanding the regiment. Owing, however, to the rush of volunteers at that time, and the inexperience of officers, these regulations were not always adhered to, and Col. Sackett found it necessary to write to the Secretary of the Treasury for instructions as to how far the certificates of recruiting officers should be received as guarantees of the correctness of bills. No answer was received to this letter, and Col. Sackett was left to his own judgment to act as he should think best.

The contractors were of two kinds: first, general contractors, who took bids for the subsistence and lodging of recruits, and who gave sureties; and, second, special contractors, who were generally keepers of lager-bier saloons and cheap boarding-houses, and who boarded and lodged recruits to the number of half a dozen, more or less, previous to their going into camp. These small contractors were anxious for the payment of their bills, and, being unable to get the money from the Government, they were driven into the hands of brokers to get them discounted. This class of men—whom we may call army brokers, and who figure more extensively than any other class as swindlers of the Government—commenced business in this City in December, 1861. They first did a legitimate, though a very shaving business, but they soon found a way of increasing the size of their bills by alterations in the figures, and followed up this fraud by making fictitious bills which were vouched for by downright forgery.

On the 6th of December, 1861, Col. Sackett resigned his post as disbursing officer for this City, and was succeeded by Lieut.-Col. Nicholas, also of the regular army. Before Col. Sackett left he had in the habit of receiving affidavits from the special contractors of the correctness of their bills, and also employed as an additional guard against fraud, detectives to ascertain whether the affidavits were true. Lieut.-Col. Nicholas held the post of disbursing officer until June, 1862, when he was relieved by Capt. Larned, who in turn gave way on the 20th of August last to Lieut.-Col. Rose, who now holds the position. During the latter part of Col. Nicholas' term, and all through the term of Capt. Larned, the brokers were in full blast, and conducted their business with a recklessness of villainy that is perfectly astounding. They employed runners to visit lager-bier shops and boarding-houses, and say and every place where it could be ascertained that a recruit had ever eaten a meal or slept over night, and induce the keepers of these places, under various arts and pretences, (often by actual bribery,) to certify and swear to bills against the Government. Not satisfied with this, they employed clerks to manufacture bills out of whole cloth, and forge signatures to them. Mr. Olcott has in his possession over forty forged signatures to bills which have been verified as forgeries by the Colonels and contractors whose names were used. Instances have been discovered where brokers have purchased claims of poor Germans for $20, and on the following day have called at his place and got him to sign what purported to be a receipt, but which was in reality a fictitious bill for $2,000. Their frauds have been perpetrated mainly through the agency of ignorant German people, who could not read our language, and who were made to swear to a bill of a thousand dollars when they supposed it was only $20, or to certify to the correctness of a large claim when they supposed they were signing a receipt for a small one. Some of this class of people, however, who had no claim against the Government, large or small, have been induced to certify and swear to bills through the agency of a bribe.

Recruiting officers are also discovered to have played the same game. Instances have come to light where recruiting officers have induced lager-bier men to sign a bill for $1,600 where the claim was only $25, and the bills have been sworn to before a notary, who either through negligence, or because he was pray to the scheme, asked no questions, and in some cases did not even administer the oath. Cases have also turned up where the Union Defence Committee had paid the regular 40 cents per ration for recruits, and the contractor has been compelled to pay five cents of each ration to the Colonel of the regiment, and 10 per cent. of his gross receipts to the Quartermaster.

Mr. Olcott commenced his labors by investigating the frauds of the army brokers, and after disposing of these he was presented by the Secretary of War with a bill which had been paid in Washington, and was sworn to by the Colonel of a New-York regiment. The bill was accompanied by the names of a large number of sub-vouchers for the different items, all of which except two, the Commissioner has discovered to be forgeries. A further investigation has brought to light the fact that this same Colonel has swindled the Union Defence Committee, swindled private citizens, swindled the General Government, and swindled every one of his subordinate officers and privates, and that the sum total of his swindling cannot fall short of $100,000. The wholesale frauds developed in this case have induced the Government to direct Mr. Olcott to investigate the transactions of each and every regiment raised in this City, where the circumstances connected with its organization are open to suspicion.

The Commissioner is not now prepared to give the names of the actors in these swindling operations, as many of them have not yet been arrested, but the principal ones will be made known in a few days. It is thought that nearly a thousand persons will be shown to have been implicated directly or indirectly in the frauds. Many of the men who have been trumpeted as martyrs to the system of "illegal and arbitrary arrests," are men who were sent to Fort Lafayette for these very frauds, and when their names come to be known, they will doubtless turn out to have been the most noisy defenders of the Government, and the swiftest to decide everybody but themselves of robbing the public treasury. It is to be hoped that the investigation will continue until every one of the scoundrels is exposed and punished. The Government has already saved thousands of dollars by the investigation in this City. Within a week after the Commissioner commenced his labors, bills amounting to over $30,000 (one bill alone being $6,000) were withdrawn by the holders, and there is no knowing how many fraudulent claims would have been presented and paid had not the Government instituted the investigation.

FURTHER DEVELOPMENTS.

Great Swindling in the Payment of Bounties to Soldiers.

Where are the Bounty Men, and How Many Have Received it More than Once?

In addition to the enormous frauds upon the United States Government which are brought to light in the statement above, we have still another feature of the general system of swindling to which, it is said, the State and country have been subjected, almost ever since the offer of bounties for the enlistment of private soldiers was made. At first—that is, for a very few weeks—there was, at least, a show of honesty in drawing the exceedingly liberal bounties offered to men to enlist; and, at that time, when a man enlisted he was taken to the quarters of the company or regiment into which he had enlisted, and there kept. That course, however, was not long generally pursued. The men, when enlisted and having received their bounties, would ask for a "pass" for a few days, to regulate their family affairs and to spend the bounty money for what themselves or their families needed. This seemed proper enough at the time, but experience proved that many of the men thus let go did not return, and were, in consequence, marked as deserters. The system was then commenced by many officers of retaining a large portion of the bounty, on granting a pass, in order to insure the return of the enlisted man. Those who had enlisted with the intention of going to the war, returned, of course, and claimed the remainder of their bounty money. But there were many who did not, and it is, at least, remarkable that of those who did not return very few have been arrested. Of the (about) six thousand men who received the bounties in the City of Brooklyn, and the immensely larger number who received the bounties in this City, it is not believed that much more than one-half are now connected with the army by reason of their first enlistment. In this connection it is proper to say that the charge of giving passes to men, while withholding the principal portion of their bounties, and taking no other measures to insure their return to camp, does not, of course, apply to officers whose desire to fill up their companies and regiments was paramount to every other. But, nevertheless, the fact is notorious among officers and privates that an immense amount of money has been taken from the resources for bounties, and that the men credited for receiving it are reported "missing."

It is also stated that there are men now in the City, in citizen's clothes, who have been enlisted from two to six times under the several bounty acts under different names, and who have never been arrested. It is also stated with equal confidence that while Rhode Island was paying promptly very heavy bounties, it was not uncommon for men here to enlist, get their bounty, leave the principal portion of it in the hands of the recruiting officer, receive the accustomed pass, and then start for Rhode Island to enlist again.

All these are charges of a grave character, and merit investigation. The extent to which this method of cheating the Government has been carried out may be partially ascertained by a careful comparison of the bounty books with the number of men who, having received bounties, are now in the ranks of the National Army.

THE VANDERBILT SIGHTED—A SCHOONER RUNS THE BLOCKADE AT WILMINGTON, N. C.

The bark Montezuma, Capt. Hammond, from Trinidad on Dec. 3, and St. Thomas on Dec. 7, arrived at this port yesterday. She reports that, on Dec. 15, in latitude 26° 18', longitude 72° 53', she passed a large steamship, with two smoke-stacks, steering south, supposed to be the Vanderbilt. On Dec. 24, latitude 37° 42', longitude 72°, passed a large number of navy bread boxes, and wrecked stuff. The Confederate schooner Retribution ran the blockade last Wilmington, N. C., on Nov. 24, and arrived at St. Thomas Dec. 7. She had as cargo 270 barrels spirits turpentine, 100 bales cotton, 100 bbls resin. She had a crew of 15 men, with three guns in the hold, and was allowed to enter in the customs, the same as any other vessel. She was commanded by Capt. Parkes, and consigned to Lane, Hall & Co.

Reported Negro Insurrection in Missouri.

St. Louis, Friday, Dec. 26.

The Halleck Guards left this city this morning, for Gray's Summit, Franklin County, on special duty. It is said they are ordered to that place to prevent troubles from negroes apprehended in that vicinity. There is a talk of a threatened negro insurrection in Franklin County, but inquiries have failed to elicit reliable foundation for such reports. There are but few negroes in the county—not enough to get up an insurrection on a considerable scale.

Drowned—Fire in Boston.

Boston, Friday, Dec. 26.

Luther Johnson, Cashier of the Union Bank, Haverhill, was drowned yesterday while skating.

A fire this forenoon, caused considerable damage to the granite building, Nos. 221 and 223 Washington-street. Albee & Vose, picture-frame dealers, Jesse Benson, Photographer, and J. E. Benson, engraver, occupants of the building, had their stocks partially destroyed.

Arrivals in the City.

Maj.-Gen. Geo. B. McClellan has returned to this City, from his recent visit to Washington.

Maj.-Gen. Pope and family are among the arrivals at the Everett House, where they are expected to remain some ten days or two weeks. The General's future movements are somewhat uncertain.

Hon. Wm. Mitchell, Member of Congress, from Indiana, and C. S. Van Wagoner, from St. Louis, are stopping at the St. Nicholas Hotel.

Judge Jones, of Rochester; Col. W. L. O'Brien, of Baltimore; Dr. J. F. Randolph; Capt. H. C. Hodges and Lieut. L. M. Sprole, of the U. S. Army; J. A. Seton, Jr., U. S. Navy; and Gen. B. Stetson, of Massachusetts, are stopping at the Metropolitan Hotel.

Cols. A. Butler and C. A. Morgan, of the United States Army, are at the Clarendon Hotel.

Forbes Parker and F. Clark, of the United States Navy; J. W. Parish and A. S. Stoddard, of St. Louis, and Horatio G. Fisher, of Philadelphia, are at the Astor House.

The Boy Preacher.—Cammond Kennedy, formerly known as the "Boy Preacher," but now of Madison University, will lecture on "Fanny Forester," in the Fifth-avenue Chapel, corner of Forty-sixth-street, on Tuesday evening, Dec. 30, at 7½ o'clock. Tickets 25 cents, to be had at the door. All his old friends are cordially invited to attend.

MARKS OF CIVILIZATION.

Liebig, the celebrated German chemist, has said that the civilization of a people may be measured by the amount of Soap its people use. This rule, however, would not be a fair criterion when Prime O. K. Soap is used, as one pound of it will outwear two of the ordinary soaps. Be sure to ask for Prime O. K. Soap. All good grocers keep it. Inseparable from New-York.—New-York can boast of two institutions peculiar to herself, and not yet equaled by anything to be found in any other city. The first is Central Park, the noblest pleasure-ground in the world. The second is equally famous in its way, and is located at No. 212 Broadway. This last, we need hardly say, is the world-renowned establishment of Knox, the American Prince of Hatters, whose chapeaux are as necessary to the outfit of a gentleman as his private meerschaum pipe. We have no better representative of American enterprise and success than Knox, who is identified with the growth of our City, and is inseparable from all isms of metropolitan fashion and style. The first thing a stranger sees, on locating in this City, is to supply himself with Knox's "latest." Then he begins to feel like a New-Yorker, and can pass muster on the promenade, or in society, as one "to the manner born." At the present season, the same No. 212 Broadway is also the fashionable repository of fur, sleigh robes, skating goods, &c. These articles can be produced there at prices quite as reasonable as they can be sold for in the humblest locality. The same may be said of Knox's new Winter hats and caps, which cost no more than they would be worth in any market. During the holidays, Knox's store is always a grand resort for the masculine sex, and we doubt not that hundreds of heads will be adorned there during the coming week. New Year's callers cannot possibly get along without the "Latest style."

Barnum's Museum was brim-full yesterday—yes, overflowing; hundreds had to go away without seeing the performances. But to-day Barnum is prepared for all that comes. He gives three performances—at 1, 3½ and 7½ o'clock—so that all who come will be sure of accommodation. "Colleen Bawn" will be given at each. Those who come early will be the least crowded, best accommodated, and see the same play. Com. Nutt, the Fat Woman, Performing Bears, &c., &c., at all hours.
